U. S. WOULD CUT OFF ALL RATIO BICKERING, SET FLAT NAVY BASIS

Proposal to Be Advanced as Parley Lubricant and "Face-Saver."

WOULD ADMIT RIGHT OF BUILDING FREELY

Then Agreement on Ships Actually Planned May Be Had, Is Belief.

U. S. ALSO WOULD JOIN MEDITERRANEAN PACT

By JOHN L. BALDERSTON.

London, Jan. 26 (N.Y.W.N.S.).—The American delegation to the London naval conference, in an effort to remove the menace of a deadlock, will bring forward the following two new proposals for consideration by the other four powers participating in the negotiations here.

1. That disputes over ratios shall be wiped out by a general declaration of the sovereign right of each nation to build any navy it chooses. Then there will be an attempt at agreement on what ships each nation will build or lay down, pending a second conference in 1936.

2. The United States will express readiness to associate itself with a Mediterranean pact, agreeing to consult with other powers shohuld peace seem threatened, but not committing America to action.

It is the thought of the American delegates that two such moves would dispose of two of the outstanding obstacles to the negotiations of a five-power treaty here.

French Attitude Doubtful.

Whether such a pact will satisfy the French claim for additional security—which is its object and the reason the British and American delegations feel obliged to take it up—remains to be seen. It isn't what the French want—they want a treaty with teeth in it—but they did not expect to get America in it at all and decision by the United States to participate, even in the most limited fashion, is intended to prove to France American good will and to render the path of the conference on strictly naval subjects less thorny.

Following a conference yesterday between Premier Andre Tardieu and Ambassador Dwight W. Morrow, it became known that the United States has accepted the French formula for discussing global tonnage in categories based on the permissibility of transferring tonnage from one category to another. This decision, concurred in by Great Britain, commits neither nation to any French contentions, but does settle the form which the negotiations will take.

Would End Talk of Needs.

Simultaneously with these important decisions the United States delegation, after a week of constant conferences, is inclined to try to end all talk about naval "needs" based on the importance of trade, the length of coats lines to be guarded and all similar considerations. The American delegates, having listened to the British, French, Italians and Japanese, felt that no attempts to assign naval ratios in any classes of ships to nations based on their absolute "needs" can ever succeed, and that if such claims, involving relative importance and, hence, pride, are to be advanced and considered, no settlement can be reached.

To save the conference and get an agreement signed by all parties, Italy's claim for parity with France, which France to date flatly refuses, muts be got out of the way, and the Japanese demand for a 7-to-10 ratio in big cruisers must be dealt with.

Inconsistency Admitted.

This is the American formula that is confidently expected to bring the five powers together. It is admittedly somewhat inconsistent with our own attitude toward Great Britain, for it means abandonment of talk about parity and ratios, but it is not only felt by America to be the only way out but the other powers are expected to accept it.

The high contracting parties will be invited in the projected Treaty of London to proclaim the sovereign right of every nation to build as big a fleet as any other, and every nation here, if the American plan is adopted, will concede the right of every other to build as many ships as it likes, subject only to such limitations as it may of its own free will and without coercion from any other nation or group of natoions, decide to accept for whatever time.

By this formula the American delegates think the Gordian knot of Franco-Italian parity and of Japanese ratio claims will be cut. Once such a declaration is signed, everybody's face will be saved. Italy will have

Wheeler Seeks Data On Dry Agent's Work

Prohibition Bureau to Be Asked for Report on J. F. C. Herbert.

Determined to shift charges and recriminations centering around prohibition administrators in the Idaho-Montana district, Senator Burton K. Wheeler, of Montana, plans to call upon the Prohibition Bureau for a report on the work of John F. C. Herbert, administrator in that district.

Although declaring that he had no interest in the matter other than learning the facts concerning enforcement efforts in the district, Senator Wheeler said last night he would ask for the report on Mr. Herbert with a view to asking his removal if charges against him are substantiated. The senator declared he did not know Mr. Herbert and had never heard of him until he was brought in the limelight recently through enforcement squabbles in Idaho. Neither does he know anything about John

STIMSON, M'DONALD HOLD CONFERENCE

Big Five Session to Start Second Week of Navy Parley Today.

SIGNOR GRANDI RELAXES

London, Jan. 26 (A.P.).—Secretary of State Henry L. Stimson today conferred with Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald preparatory to the "big five" meeting tomorrow.

The American Secretary of State motored 20 miles from his country home to Checquers to have his talk, and perhaps another cup of tea, with the prime minister. The meeting tomorrow of the chiefs of the five delegations at 10 Downing street will start the London parley on the second week of its work.

The American delegation circles tonight tended to point to things accomplished thus far rather than to unproductive situations, such as exists between France and Italy. Throughout last week the Americans were able to win the delegations on all the main points of procedure put forward by Mr. Stimson in discussions among the delegations and in the committee of the chief delegates.

These points included one that the delegations should operate as units and not refer too much work to cumbersome technical committees. Another favored interchange between delegations by direct conversations rather than in full meetings. A third sought construction of a thorough groundwork of confidence in the place of a bulwark of figures of needs and requirements. Still another was that the conference should approach all questions conservatively without consideration of radical changes in navies, such as abolition of any special category, until after thorough investigation has been made.

The coming week should see the full conference program decided upon, this being the principal purpose of the "big five" meeting tomorrow. It is likely that Mr. Stimson will press for consideration first

NAVY VETERAN DIES AT AGE OF 82 YEARS

Rear Admiral Kimball Aided in Development of Submarines.

MANY YEARS IN SERVICE

Rear Admiral William Wirt Kimball, U. S. N., retired, died suddenly of heart disease at 4 o'clock yesterday morning at his residence, 1737 Q street northwest. He was 82 years old and had a long and distinguished career.

Born at Paris, Me., on January 9, 1848, the son of Brig. Gen. William King and Frances Freeland Rawson Kimball, Admiral Kimball entered the Naval Academy and was graduated in 1869. He was promoted to ensign in 1870, master in 1871, lieutenant in 1874, lieutenant commander in 1896, commander in 1899, captain in 1905 and rear admiral on December 17, 1908.

His lengthy career with the Navy included service at the North and South Atlantic, European, Asiatic and Pacific stations. He was a member of the first class of officers at the torpedo station in 1870. Two years later he assisted in the capture of American steamers filibustering in the Orinoco and was torpedo officer of the first torpedo craft of the Navy in 1874.

In the early eighties he engaged in the development of magazine and machine guns, and he designed, constructed and operated the first armed cars used by United States forces. He assisted in the occupation of the Isthmus of Panama in 1885 and reported to Congress the progress of work on the Panama Canal in 1886.

Admiral Kimball was executive officer of the Detroit in the affair of Enchasdas in Rio Harbor in 1894. In the early nineties he devoted his talents to the development of the submarine. John P. Holland, inventor of the Holland boats, wrote of him: "Submarining owes more to him then to any other living man." He organized the first torpedo boat flotilla of the Navy and commanded the At-

Virginia Police Scan Skies For Plane Claimed Stolen

Larceny Warrant Sworn Out by Counsel for Aviation Club, Although Pilot Is Said to Hold Bill of Sale and License.

Police of Virginia cities were on the leged to have been stolen from the lookout last night for an airplane al-Mount Vernon Airways, after a larceny warrant had been sworn to by Jesse Duke, counsel acting for the United States Aviation Club, with offices in the Colorado Building. The pilot of the plane, Milton O'Connor, is said, however, to hold both the bill of sale and the operator's license for the craft.

Following two attempts to persuade Elvin W. Robertson, manager of the airport, to hold the plane, which had been stored in the Mount Vernon Airways since the latter part of December, Mr. Duke obtained the warrant from Justice of the Peace Harry Shepherd at Accotink, Fairfax County, Va.

The plane took off from Mount Vernon early yesterday afternoon, and a few hours later Richmond, Va., police attempted to arrest O'Connor when he landed to refuel at the Charles Flying Field. They arirved, however, just as the aviator was waving good-bye.

Although Mr. Duke contends that the plane is the property of the United States Aviation Club, Mr. Robertson said his understanding was that the former merely was trying to collect a $60 bill from the pilot. The field manager said that the attorney had twice asked him to hold the craft and was on the field when Mr. O'Connor took off. Mr. Robertson said he declined to hold the plane because no attachment papers had been issued.

The plane was stored by Mr. O'Connor, according to Mr. Robertson, and the storage fee was paid by the aviator before he left. The pilot holds all papers indicating ownership, he said.

Last reports of the craft were that it was heading toward South Boston, VVa.

BODIES OF PAIR, MISSING WEEK, FOUND IN FIELD

Laurel Boy, Shot Twice, Discovered Beside Slain Man.

PISTOL CLUTCHED IN HAND OF ELDER

DEATH SCENE NEAR TRAVELED AVENUE

Tragedy Uncovered by Girl Cutting Across Lots on Way to Church.

Gordon Wellford, 14-year-old Laurel, Md., schoolboy, who had been the object of a week's search by police, was found dead in a sparsely settled section of Laurel yesterday by a girl on her way to church. Alongside the body of the boy, who had been shot twice, was the body of Lin Montgomery, 24, race track follower, who the police think sent a bullet into his brain after slaying the boy.

Esther Watkins, 14, of Laurel, cut across the field at Fifth street and Montgomery avenue early yesterday and discovered the bodies.

Montgomery had stayed at the Wellford home at 507 Prince Georges avenue for a time about a year ago, having been befriended by the family while he was out of work.

Body Found on Overcoat.

The boy's body was found lying face down on Montgomery's overcoat, at a spot about 30 yards from Fifth avenue and 300 yards from the much traveled Montgomery avenue. He was fully clothed. One bullet had passed through his chest and another entered his head behind the left ear. Montgomery's head, with a bullet wound through the left temple, rested on the boy's back.

The death scene is but a stone throw from a playfield used by the boys from the Laurel grade school, which Gordon attended, and from which he was to have been graduated in June.

Police found no evidence of a struggle, but adhere to the theory that the boy was killed while resisting a physical attack by Montgomery. There is no tangible evidence, they said, to support this theory, as there was no evident disarrangement of the clothing of either.

Frozen Hand Grips Revolver.

A .38-caliber revolver found in the frozen hand of Montgomery is believed by authorities to be the instrument that caused the deaths. Four shells of five in the chamber of the gun had been discharged, although but three bullet wounds were found in the bodies.

As soon as the news spread of the finding of the bodies, a large crowd gathered at the scene and hampered the work of the police in making a survey of the premises. Chief of Police Milton Haynes, Constable Frank P. Hurd and Justice of the Peace Henry P. Scott, who were called to the scene, viewed the bodies and ordered their removal.

Checking back on the movements of the boy, police discovered that the last time he was seen alive was Monday night, when he had been working as a pin boy in a bowling alley at Laurel. Montgomery and the boy left the place together.

Aid of Former Official.

Police also learned that Montgomery, who lived at the Osborne Hotel at Laurel, had until a week ago been employed by Breckenridge Long, Assistant Secretary of State under the Wilson administration. He was discharged, they said, for excessive drinking.

Mr. and Mrs. Joshua T. Wellford, parents of the boy, told police that they had taken Montgomery into their home about a year ago, when he was without work. He stayed there for a few weeks, they said, until he found employment. Gordon had met Montgomery at the Laurel race track, where the boy had been employed exercising horses.

Police believe that the killings took place early Tuesday morning. What puzzled the investigators was the absence of snow underneath the bodies. They later conjectured that the heat of their bodies had melted the layer of snow. In the pocket of Montgomery's clothes was found a bottle containing a quantity of whisky.

Man's History Mystery.

In attempting to reconstruct the tragedy, Prince Georges County Policeman Claude Reese and Deputy Sheriff Ralph Brown believe that the boy had been lured into the tract by Montgomery, and when he resisted physical approaches he was shot.

They were unable to trace Montgomery's history prior to the acquaintanceship between the two which began about a year ago. They have no knowledge of his parents or of his original home.

A coroner's inquest will be held tomorrow night at Laurel, it was announced.

There are four other children in the Wellford family, William, 19; Franklin, 11; Blanche, 10, and Betty, 5.

HOOVER INDEX OF EMPLOYES HIT BY SHOUSE

Menace in Tabulation as Revealed by Post Is Pointed Out.

POLITICAL PATRONAGE TERMED ITS SOLE AIM

Information Already on File in Departments, Asserts Democrat.

CHAIRMAN SUSPECTS CLUB OVER CONGRESS

Appointees May Lose Jobs for Sins of Sponsors, He Predicts.

Chairman Jouett Shouse, of the Democratic national executive committee, sees in the order for a complete tabulation of all appointed Federal employes for the White House files a serious menace. He comments on the matter as follows:

"President Hoover's card index of all Government employes, the existence of which was revealed by The Washington Post Sunday, suggests a use for political purposes of the Federal patronage to an extent heretofore undreamed of.

"He has sent to all departments cards to be filled out by every employe giving a full picture of the history of his employment.

"The information embraced in the replies to the President's questionnaire—to whom the office holder owes his appointment, his salary, term of service, from what congressional district he comes, &c.—is already on file, of course, in the department concerned, so it is difficult to explain on any nonpolitical hypothesis why Mr. Hoover would want the record of tens of thousands of minor employes in the hands of his political agent, Walter Newton.

Previous Precedent Ignored.

"However, the White House incumbent is the first of our Chief Executives to install a political liaison officer and a personal undercover man as members of the secretariat. Doubtless other Presidents have used similar agencies but in official places that, at least, furnished a disguise.

"The questionnaire that is agitating the Federal personnel, however, is frankly governmental. It was printed at the Government Printing Office and was formally transmitted to the chiefs of the various departments with instructions to have everybody in those departments answer the queries and send the cards to Secretary Newton.

"It is not surprising that the department chiefs see in the new system a purpose of the President personally to handle the patronage, which has up to now been left either to the Cabinet members or has been assigned on recommendation of the congressmen of the President's party.

Club Over Congress Seen.

"Nor is it strange that Congress sees in it a purpose of visiting presidential displeasures on the appointees, for the sins of their sponsors, such as voting independently of the presidential desires. Wielding the patronage club is nothing new in the efforts of Presidents who sought to compel congressional obedience, but in the past this concerned future patronage, and not interference with men who were already in the jobs, and presumably doing their work satisfactorily.

"It has been a theory that the President of the United States had too much to do, with the important problems and policies of Government, to spare the time to vise the appointment of the myriad minor clerks, messengers and stenographers requisite to the work of the departments, but that such a deduction is not applicable to the present administration is evidenced by the statement attributed to a department head by Carlisle Bargeron, the author of The Washington Post's account: 'We are having men come over here all the time from the White House.'

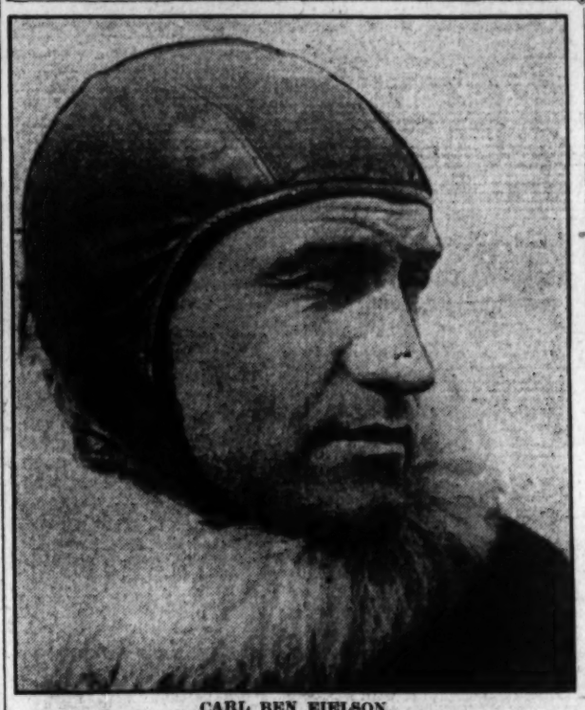
News Called Shocking.

"It comes with something of a shock to learn of the existence of this ill-omened roster, particularly as the dossiers are to be under the personal charge of Secretary Newton, former representative from Minnesota, and the White House contact man with Congress.

"While the plan, so far as it has developed, does not necessarily impiy a raid on the Civil Service, the portent is not encouraging to the Civil Service principle which was established under Grover Cleveland, and which has been observed by every President, Republican as well as Democrat, since.

"The life of a Government clerk is perilous enough without the addition of a potential threat that unless he, and the man to whom he owes his appointment, does his share in furthering the political fortunes of the President, he is likely to find himself out of a job."

EIELSON PLANE FOUND SMASHED; SEARCHERS FAIL TO FIND BODIES



CARL BEN EIELSON.

Parts of Craft Are Widely Scattered, Indicating Terrific Fall.

DOG TEAMS ARE SENT TO SCENE BY NANUK

Two Fliers Who Made Discovery Plan to Return.

BORLAND'S FATHER STILL HOLDS HOPE

Elder Eielson, However, Says He Has Been Prepared to Hear Worst.

Seattle, Jan. 26 (A.P.).—On an island of ice in a lagoon near the coast of Siberia, 90 miles southeast of North Cape, two fliers yesterday found the scattered wreckage of the airplane of Carl Ben Eielson and his mechanic, Earl Borland, missing since November 9.

This would place the plane in the Anguiema River Valley, where recent dispatches from Moscow reported a plane wrecked.

With its cabin split wide the wreckage of the plane was strewn over a wide area.

The craft had fallen apparently from a high altitude. The motor had been torn from the fuselage and hurled more than 100 feet from the ship, the right wing was demolished and the tail was torn off.

A search of the deep snow, which was drifted over the wreckage, revealed no trace of the fliers.

Believe Occupants Were Killed.

Pilots Joe Crosson and Harold Gillam, who made the discovery, said Eielson and Borland must have been killed at the moment of impact.

Details of the find were communicated to the Seattle Times today in radio messages from Marion Swenson, marooned on the fur-trading ship Nanuk, near North Cape. Eielson and Borland left Teller, Alaska, November 9 for North Cape to transport passengers and furs from the Nanuk to Nome.

They were never seen again.

Crosson first sighted the Eielson plane, the dispatches said. His attention was attracted to the spot by the exposed cabin of the plane, which glistened in the sunlight. He signaled to Gillam and both alighted on the snow. Gillam said he had previously scouted over the spot but failed to see the plane because of poor visibility.

Provisions Found Untouched.

The two men found a supply of provisions in the cabin, untouched. A slab of bacon fell out of the cockpit when Crosson opened one of the doors which had escaped jamming in the crash.

The fuselage, headed southeast, was found about 10 miles inland on the island. It was near Reindeer camp, where herders had reported hearing an airplane November 9, but had been unable to see it because of fog.

Crosson and Gillam planned another flight to the island today, taking men with them to clear away the snow in a search for bodies. Dog teams from the Nanuk, led by native drivers, left for the wreck last night carrying supplies and equipment. The search for the bodies may be a protracted one because of deep snow.

Borland's Family Hopes.

The Borland family here today was inclined to regard the circumstances that neither the body of Eielson nor Borland was found as indicating that the fliers might be safe somewhere.

"It means to me that Eielson and my boy were not injured when the plane crashed," W. E. Borland, Earl's father, said. "They are known to have flown low over a reindeer camp and I believe that they set out for

DELIRIOUS PATIENT SHOOTS NURSE, DIES

Woman Seriously Wounded by Pneumonia Victim in Richmond.

LAMP FIRES CLOTHING

Fort Monroe, Va., Jan. 26 (A.P.).—T. L. Heath, 36, died of pneumonia at his home here today an hour after police believe he shot and seriously wounded Mrs. Tom P. Kerse, his nurse, early today.

Mrs. Kerse was in a serious condition at the City Hospital tonight, physicians said, with a portion of a bullet in her brain.

Heath has been critically ill since Tuesday, and was often delirious, according to Dr. Frank Caravati, family physician. Detectives investigating the case believed Heath shot the nurse while in a state of delirium.

Mrs. Kerse was found lying on the floor of her patient's room, with the ill man standing over her and a revolver nearby, by Mrs. Heath, attracted to her husband's room by the noise. The nurse was found shot, and in falling she had knocked over a small lamp, setting her clothes afire. Members of the family extinguished the blaze and rushed her to the hospital.

Heath told police he shot the nurse when she knocked him down. The police theory was that Heath was delirious and tried to get up, and that the nurse's efforts to quiet him were annoying and prompted him to shoot her.

The patient died while police were still investigating the case.

15 Student Fliers Land At Raleight on Test Hop

Raleigh, N. C., Jan. 26 (A.P.).—Fifteen airplanes, in which Curtiss-Wright student fliers from Valley Stream, N. Y., accompanied by three instructors, are making a Southern tour, landed at Raleigh this afternoon and will spend the night here.

The planes will probably stop at Columbia, S. C., tomorrow to refuel on their way to Florida, leaders of the squadron said. Two Raleigh students will join the flight here.

BYRD UNCONCERNED AT WINTER OUTLOOK

MESSAGE SENT BY RADIO

Long Beach, Calif., Jan. 26 (A.P.).—Don Wallace, amateur operator of W6AM here, said he was in touch with the Byrd expedition near the South Pole between 1 and 2 a. m. this morning and that the expedition is showing no concern over the possibility of being ice bound through the winter.

Informed by Wallace of newspaper reports that there was some alarm felt for the expedition in the United States and that other nations had been asked to aid in reaching the group near the South Pole, the operator answered:

"Much ado about nothing. We expect to be out of cold storage soon. Evidently there is more worrying in the United States than here at the pole. We are taking all precautions. It is true we are not alarmed."

Wallace said the message sent by the operator was dictated personally by Rear Admiral Richard Byrd, in command of the expedition.

Reports have been circulated that the expedition may have insufficient food and supplies to last it through another winter.

Aegean Isles Rocked By Strong Earthquake

Athens, Jan. 26 (A.P.).—Reports from the islands of Psara and Antipsara, in the Aegean Sea, said many houses had collpased today in a violent earthquake. Other buildings showed big cracks. The inhabitants were panic-stricken and deserted their homes for the open country. No loss of life was reported. The shocks were continuing when the report was dispatched.

Psara, also known as Ipsara, is about five miles in length and nearly that broad. Anti-psara, and adjacent inlet, is much smaller. Psara, the seaport of the island of that name, is a considerable town.

Valued Mackay Prize Won By Army Air Photographer

Capt. A. W. Stevens Noted for Camera Work at Long Range.

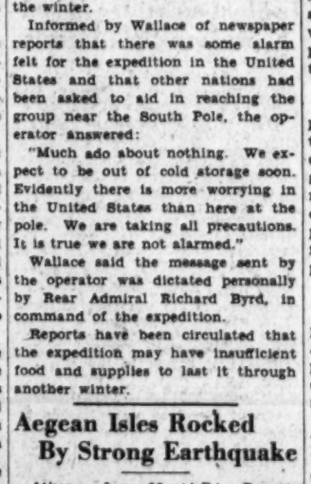
(Associated Press.)

Mastery of the upper air and his use of long range photography has won for Capt. Albert W. Stevens, of the Army Air Corps, one of the most coveted aeronautical prizes, the Mackay trophy.

Stevens is the flier who late last year successfully photographed Mount Rainier and a group of high, snow-covered peaks at a distance of 227 miles, aiming his camera by compass at subjects far beyond the range of his own vision.

This achievement was one of three, all exceedingly meritorious in the opinion of the board making the award, which were combined to produce results of great value to aviation.

The first accomplishment noted by the awarding board was his flight last February to an altitude of 38,611 feet with Lieut. Harry Johnson as pilot.



CAPT. ALBERT W. STEVENS.

Not only was a record set for two-place planes, but Stevens made ex-it when they landed, leaving their food supplies behind because they were not needed and would burden them needlessly.

"They carried two pairs of skiis on the plane. My message did not mention the skiis and probably Lomen was unaware that they had them. The fact that he did not mention them indicates that Crosson and Gillam did not find the skiis. In that case, of course, they were not injured. Where they went or why we have not heard from them are questions that time must answer."

Alfred J. Loumen, who sent the message to the elder Borland here telling of the finding of the wrecked plane, is general manager of the relief expedition at Nome.

Eielson's Father Is Dazed.

Grand Forks, N. Dak., Jan. 26 (A.P.).—Ole Eielson, of Hatton, N. Dak., father of Carl Ben Eielson, when notified today that his son's plane had been found wrecked in the Arctic wastes, said he "knew it was going to be like that, but I think I will feel better now, for the suspense has been terrible."

Mr. Eielson received the news here from the newspapermen and also in a message from Joe Crosson, one of the pilots who discovered Eielson's wrecked plane. He appeared dazed and asked to have a message read to him several titmes. When its import dawned on him, his voice faltered and he made a desperate effort to retain his composure.

"Of course, I had hopes," he said, that Ben would be found alive and safe. But it had been so long, I could not help but feel that something like this had happened. I didn't want to give up, but I have been prepared for it.

"I felt all along that if any one found him dead or alive it would be his friend Joe Crosson. I knew Joe would stay in the search until the truth was known one way or the other."

Cables Members of Family.

Accompanied by Ben's sister, Helen, a nurse in a hospital here, Mr. Eielson left for Hatton today and from there he sent messages to other members of the family. He cabled Ben's brother, Oliver, in Lima, Peru, asking him to come at once, and telegraphed the news to another brother, Authur, in New York City. A sister, Adeline, in Wenatchee, Wash., already had been informed from friends in Seattle.

Several hundred messages of condolences were received at the Eielson home in Hatton today, and townspeople, who have shared the Eielson family's anxiety through the long weeks when there was no definite news, came to the home to tell of their sorrow.

At the University of North Dekota, here, where Ben had been a student, plans were being made for some memorial to him, and members of his fraternity, Alpha Tau Omega, planned to express their sympathy to the family.

Mrs. Borland's Calm Unbroken.

Fairbanks, Alaska, Jan. 26 (A.P.).—The calm with which Mrs. Irene Borland, wife of Earl Borland, has borne the strain of the more than two and one-half months waiting while the Siberian wastes held secret the fate of her husband, remained unbroken today. She was informed in a radio message from Pilot Harold Gillam that the plane in which Carl Ben Eielson and Borland were flying was found wrecked near North Cape, Siberia.

"Crosson and Harold will give me the truth tomorrow," she said.

Mrs. Borland has lived here with her two children since her husband was employed as a mechanic for the Alaskan Airways, Inc. The company had contracted to transport passengers and furs from the fur trading ship Nanuk, ice bound at North Cape, to Nome. They had made one round trip and were attempting a second trip on November 9 when lost. Borland had intended to return to the States next spring to begin preparing for a pilot's license.

Reconstructs Arctic Tragedy.

New York, Jan. 26 (A.P.).—The Arctic tragedy, which apparently has claimed the lives of Carl Ben Eielson and Earl Borland, was reconstructed today by Capt. Raymond S. Pollister, former commander of the auxiliary schooner Nanuk.

On receipt of a telegram from Capt. Olaf Swenson, commander of the Nanuk, telling of the discovery of Eielson's wrecked plane, Capt. Pollister said, "there is no question about Eielson's being dead."

Eileson was lost last November 9 in a flight to the Nanuk, icebound off North Cape, Siberia, after he had taken six passengers from the schooner to Nome, Alaska, on a previous flight.

"Eielson was caught in a snowstorm an hour out of Nome," was the way Capt. Pollister reconstructed the accident. "He continued flying, evidently confident that he could reach the Nanuk, while Frank Dorbandt, his flying partner, turned back to Nome."

Capt. Pollister explained that an Arctic snowstorm is so blinding, it is impossible to see 5 feet away.

Struck at Full Speed, Theory.

"There are no instruments in the Arctic precise enough to give the exact altitude," he continued. "Eielson flew 90 miles past the Nanuk, and then, thinking it safe to fly no longer, tried to land. He must have struck the ground while flying at full speed, to scatter the engine for 100 feet around the plane."

Eielson was noted for his exploits with aerial exploration expeditions. His two greatest achievements were his 2,000-mile flight with Sir Hubert Wilkins across the top of the world to Spitzbergen and his epoch-making flights with Sir Hubert in Antarctica.

Soviet Aviator Is Off.

Krasnovarsk, Siberia, Jan. 26 (A.P.). Soviet Aviator Ivan Chukhnovsky, after mnay previous unsuccesaful attempts, today started on his long flight to Cape North, where the wreckage of the airplane of Carl Ben Eielson and Earl Borland was found yesterday.

He was accompanied by three assistants and the correspondent of a Moscow newspaper. Because of the weight of his passengers and the lack of snow on the flying field the aviator was forced to unload some of his cargo of food supplies and extra fuel. He was reported at Tulun, Siberia, later in the day.

JURY IS DISCHARGED IN GIRL-BANDIT CASE

Former Student at Normal School, Robber's Wife, Is Returned to Cell.

AWAITS NEW TRIAL MOVE

Wabash, Ind., Jan. 26 (A.P.).—The jury in the trial of Josephine Miller Alger, 21, who was accused of having aided her husband, Gene Alger, in the robbery of the Lafontaine State Bank last October, reported today that it was unable to reach a verdict. The jury was discharged and Mrs. Alger was returned to jail to await the decision of Joseph T. Murphy, county prosecutor, as to whether she would be brought to trial again.

Mrs. Alger, the daughter of Runnels Miller, a Jeffersonville, Ind., policeman, was alleged to have driven the car in which her husband escaped after robbing the Lafontaine bank. Her husband is serving a fifteen-year term for the robbery of a bank in Paris Crossing, in southern Indiana. She was alleged to have been a participant in the Paris Crossing robbery, but the charge against her was dismissed, following a plea of guilty by her husband.

The Algers were married last summer while he was on parole from the State Reformatory, where he was serving a term for the slaying of an Indianapolis police officer who had sought to capture him as an alleged automobile thief.

Alger was a student at a university in Indianapolis at the time the policeman was slain. His courtship of the young woman was carried on at Danville, Ind., where he was taken for trial. She was then a student in a normal school at Danville.

Mrs. Alger's case was given to the jury at 2:45 p. m. yesterday. The jury carried on its deliberations throughout the late afternoon and night. At 11 o'clock this morning it reported to Judge Frank O. Switzer that there was no possibility of reaching a verdict and was then discharged.

The long wait without word as to her fate affected Mrs. Alger greatly. She was near collapse last night. Today, however, she had recovered somewhat.

During her trial she testified that she was an expectant mother. Her attorneys cited this to the jury as a reason why she should be acquitted.

Lobby Committee Asked To Investigate Banks

(Associated Press.)

The Senate lobby committee was asked in a letter made public yesterday by the people's lobby to "investigate the superlobby—the banking and credit octopus."

"This banking and credit octopus," the letter said, "holds in the strangle of its tentacles the power industry, the railroads, the oil industry, the steel industry, the mining industry, all manufacturers, the farming industry, the meat packing industry, America's world-wide foreign policy. It is the sugar industry in Cuba."

The letter suggested that the committee "invite the presidents or executive officers of the larger banks, trust companies and investment trusts in New York, Chicago, Philadelphia and Boston to tell you the truth."

Eielson Conceived Idea Of Alaska Airways Here

Almost nine years ago, while a guard at the United States House Office Building, Lieut. Eielson conceived the idea of opening the Territory of Alaska to aviation. At the time he held a commission in the Air Corps Reserve. During the year he was in Washington, Lieut. Eielson confided his dream to Dan A. Sutherland, delegate to Congress from Alaska, and to Olger B. Burtness, representative from Eielson's home district in North Dakota.

He left the Capital in 1922, made his way to Alaska alone, and got a position teaching in the only high school in Fairbanks. Before many months passed he had obtained backing for a commercial aviation company.

REVISION OF TARIFF BILL HELD NEAR END

Action on Few Remaining Amendments to Begin in Senate Today.

PARLEY YET TO BE HELD

(Associated Press.)

After four and a half months of adding and subtracting in consideration of the House tariff bill, Senate leaders are beginning to see the end of the revision process in their chamber.

That does not mean that a measure backed by a majority of both houses will be ready for deposit on the White House doorstep in the next week or ten days, but when the Senate does pass the bill a great sigh of relief will go up from the weary legislators, and the tariff bill of 1930 will be well on the road to completion.

The usual conference with the House to adjust differences between the bills passed by both houses must yet be held, and that itself is expected by party chieftains to take at least a month or more.

Few Amendments Remain.

Senate leaders are basing their hopes for a final vote in that body by mid-February on the fact that but half a dozen committee amendments remain to be acted upon, and this work will begin today. Then individual amendments to the entire bill will be in order. There are approximately 100 of these pending, but there is reason to believe many will not be called up.

As the bill now stands it represents a revision upward of the entire agricultural schedule, but many of the House increases on industrial products and items related to the farm but not classed as such for tariff purposes have been eliminated by the Senate, and some major industrials have been assigned rates lower than in existing law.

Rates on automobiles have been materially slashed; structural steel and pig iron duties have been lowered; sugar has been denied an increased levy; hides, leathers and shoes have been restored to the free list, and a host of other changes have been wrought that have led some Republican leaders to assert that a hopeless deadlock will eventuate when the bill is returned to the House.

Bill of Some Sort Expected.

However, the great majority say there will be a tariff bill, but are making no predictions as to how it will be brought about.

One of the big arguments to come when the bill is opened to individual amendments will center around the proposed duty of 8 cents a hundred pounds on cement, a free list commodity. Coalitionists—Democrats and Republican Independents—who have been generally successful in keeping the revision limited to farm and mine products are expected to oppose the cement duty as they did other building material rates.

There is at least one Eastern Democrat, however, who believes the seaboard cement manufacturers are entitled to protection from importations. He is Senator Copeland, of New York, who in a statement Saturday night expressed confidence that a "large number of Democrats will be found on the side of this important American industry" when the vote is taken.

"Such an action is in line with the accepted Democratic standards of today," he said, adding that the American manufacturer could not continue "indefinitely to sell cement at a loss in seaport cities."

Mr. Copeland probably will favor even a higher duty on cement than that carried in the bill. The proposed levy, he said, amounts only to 30 cents a barrel and would "not keep out one barrel of foreign cement."

Woman Senator's Rites Conducted

Mrs. Felton, Who Served Day in Congress, Is Buried in Georgia.

Cartersville, Ga., Jan. 26 (A.P.).—Mrs. Rebecca Latimer Felton was buried today in the Red Hills of northwest Georgia, where she spent most of her life and from whence she went to Washington in 1922 to become the only woman ever to sit as a member of the United States Senate.

Georgia's "grand old lady" died at the age of 94 in an Atlanta hospital Friday night.

Citizens of Cartersville, the nearby mountain towns and of Georgia formed a sorrowing pilgrimage to the church to hear ministers of the city praise her work as a leader of the women's suffrage movement, as an educator and as an outspoken defender of the Christian faith. From all over the Nation came telegrams paying her tribute.

In Sam Jones' Memorial Methodist Episcopal Church South the Rev. W. B. Robison, pastor, eulogized Cartersville's most distinguished citizen.

Two Aviators Vow To Locate Graham

Kelly and James, Ready for Long Trip, Will Resume Hunt.

Las Vegas, Nev., Jan. 26 (A.P.).—Equipped to remain out for days, Fred W. Kelly and Jimmy James, Western Air Express pilots took off here today in a determined search for Maurice Graham, veteran W. A. E. pilot, who disappeared while flying the mail between Las Vegas and Salt Lake City in a blizzard the night of January 10.

The two pilots, flying Boening ships, have radios aboard and said they would search until Graham and his plane are found.

Kelly and James are the only aviators still searching for Graham. Pilots of the other planes, over 30 in all, gave up during the week, and returned to their bases. Navy and Army planes had participated in the search.

Boy Scout Scholarship Awarded to Rescuer, 17

New York, Jan. 26 (A.P.).—The National Court of Honor of the Boy Scouts of America announced tonight the award of the $300 scholarship of the Veterans of Foreign Wars to Perry E. Piper, 17-year-old Eagle Lone Scout, of Sumner, Ill.

The award was made to Piper because of exceptional scholarship and because he risked his life to save another boy from drowning, the announcement said. Piper saved Elmer Corrie, of Venice, Ill., then 12 years old, from drowning in a river in which both were swimming in August, 1926.

U. S. WOULD CUT OFF RATIO ARGUMENT TO OIL PARLEY

gained universal recognition of parity with France as a sovereign right, which is what she asks.

France will not have specifically recognized the equal importance of Italy with herself by definitely admitting the Italian right to a fleet as big as the French, which France refuses to do, and Premier Tardieu declares for political reasons to be impossible.

Not less important, Japan will be rid of the ratio issue expressed in a treaty form such as she accepted for battleships. No more will be heard of 6 to 10 or 7 to 10 and one of the crucial issues at this conference will be sidestepped.

The American delegation's present plan is that once these political problems, which have to be solved somehow to get an agreement, are thus circumvented or outflanked without any nation losing face, technical naval problems of limitation can then be tackled on lines not of national "needs" or prestige, but on the frank basis that every nation's fleet is built in relatoin to the fleet of every other nation and that, just as Secretary of State Stimson alone admitted at the second plenary session of the conference, the United States fleet is built with reference primarily to Great Britain, so similar admissions should be made all around.

Ten Dual Relationships.

There are five naval powers at this conference and thus ten dual relationships to be considered, the Americans are pointing out.

The problem is pronounced too complex for even an approach to settlement at one conference. Each nation will therefore be asked, taking into consideration the actual, not paper, program of every other for the next six years, not for the indefinite future, to state how many ships of what classes it proposes to build in the next five or six years. Experts will then be called in and there will be much haggling and much comparison of relative strengths based on the proposals made, but if the technicalities of this conference are strictly kept within these limits, and all political factors taken care of as indicated above, then and then only the Americans are confident of success.

How this new method of approach would work out as between the United States and Japan was thus explained to me. Japan would receive in the projected treaty solemn assevaration by the United States that she has a right to build as big a fleet as she likes, just as each nation will receive a similar declaration from each other.

Prestige Strong Factor.

Prestige will thus be saved. A powerful effect has been produced on the Americans by the Japanese explanation of the prestige factor in their feelings.

But twhen Japan is asked to forget ratios and also a long-term program and state what cruisers she proposes to build before 1936 and the United States and Great Britain do the same, referring all questions of future ships of all classes to the next conferences, an agreement, though most difficult, seems probable.

Just so, France, which proposes to have twelve big cruisers built or building by the year of the next conference, and Italy, who proposes to have six, may cut down a ship or two if their faces are saved, thus meeting the British admiralty's desire that France and Italy should not have between them more than fifteen big cruisers, which is the British figure under the tentative arrangement with the United States.

U. S. in Pacifier's Role.

To sum up, the American position now, it is pointed out, is that our delegation's job, and one which it believes it can carry out, is to get around existing rivalries and fears between other participants to the conference by devising new formulae, and especially by American association with a Mediterranean pact, in the hope that the difficult tenchical questions ahead can be solved if considered simply and on a short-term basis only, and with no coutry forced to lose face by admitting permanent inferiority to any other.

The American delegation refuses to permit battleships to be discussed before cruisers, but is willing, if and when cruiser questions are settled, to postpone replacement of battleships until the next conference five or six years hence.

The Americans at present do not intend to be drawn into any discussions on the size of battleships in the future. They hold, and again this statement is made on the fullest authority, that there is no use dealing with such technical questions years before the new ships will be laid down. But their main objection is that they have ascertained in discussions here that each power has different ideas as to what the maximum size of future capital ships ought to be. France and Italy mention 10,000 tons, the Japanese 20,000, the British 23,000, and while some of these figures are tentative only, they prove, in the American view, that once the size of battleships were admitted to discussion, enormously complicated arguments would result from which no outcome could be expected at this time.

MacDonald Plan Misunderstood.

The Americans have learned that Premier MacDonald's mistermed proposal to abolish battleships was a misunderstanding and that the present board of admiralty has no intention of doing this and that MacDonald admits he couldn't make them if he tried, which effectually disposes for the present of an issue on which much ink has been shed.

When will the conference get to work? This week, delegates prophesy hopefully, althuogh it isn't likely that the agenda can be agreed at the five-power meeting at Downing street tomorrow. As an antidote to impatience I quote three remarks from one of the chief movers in the conference:

"The less we hurry, the quicker we shall be," "The way to get a short conference is to prepare for an interminable one," and "It may be that we shall find we have reached agreement at this conference without having been able to agree on an agenda at all."

MEETING OF BIG FIVE IS SCHEDULED TODAY

of the cruiser problem, which particularly concerns the United States and Great Britain.

The Franco-Italian differences on the principle of parity were the most important issue to develop in the past week. The tendency after the unproductive meeting of Premier Andre Tardieu and Foreign Secretary Dino Grandi yesterday was to let this problem cool for a while, the accepted procedure at international conferences.

Other Issues Pressing.

Other issues are pressing for attention. The Americans view Japanese proposals to increase their 5-5-3 ratio for capital ships to 10-10-7 for auxiliary craft as most important for the Japanese and American delegations.

Following the Italian demand for parity, the French delegation circles have been quick to point to the ratio problem which exists between Japan, the United States, and Great Britain. The French and Italians say their own parity trouble is only one of the serious conference problems. In their opinion Japanese insistence on an increased ratio may throw the strengths of the three greatest navies out of proportion and call for a new international arrangement.

M. Tardieu was not pessimistic concerning the Italian situation tonight. French Minister of Labor Loucheur came to London today and worked with the premier tonight on French domestic business. The resulting lull in negotiations gave Signor Grandi some relaxation for he had kept the week-end clear for continuance of his conversations with the French. Tonight the whole Italian delegation met at the room of the foreign secretary to review its position after the events of the week.

No statement was forthcoming, but it was understood it was unanimously decided that no change was possible in the viewpoint of the Italian delegation.

The view was again expressed that Italy would not be able to adhere to any treaty concluded at the conference which does not contain the principle of parity with any continental power of Europe in some shape or form.

The word from the French delegation tonight was that Franco-Italian statecraft undoubtedly would discover a way out of the difficulty despite its menacing nature.

All of the delegations spent Sunday quietly, many hugging their fireplaces instead of venturing out into the keen winter wind and cold drizzle which began at noon. Rear Admiral Hilary P. Jones, one of the leading American advisers, was sufficiently improved from his illness to be able to visit his offices during the day.

Americans and French Meet.

An important conference between American and French delegates to the naval conference was held tonight at the French headquarters.

Ambassadors Dwight W. Morrow and Hugh S. Gibson called on Premier Andre Tardieu. Rene Massigli, French representative at the League of Nations, was present also, and Foreign Minister Aristide Briand joined the conference later.

The subject of the conversation was not stated, and there were many speculations regarding it. One was that the discussion concerned the relative advantages of total or categorical tonnage limitation and the other was that Mr. Morrow might have had some suggestions for settlement of the Franco-Italian impasse.

Later it was said informally that the Americans and the French had principally discussed the agenda of the conference, which at present is absorbing the attention of all delegations at present. It was added that no complete agreement had been reached, but that "progress was made."

The Americans are anxious not to seem to be insisting on the imposition of their agenda ideas on the other delegations, and consequently friendly discussions are proceeding.

JAPAN PESSIMISTIC ON NAVY DISCUSSION

Suspicion of United States and Britain Is Shown by Newspapers.

ISSUE-DODGING CHARGED

Tokyo, Jan. 26 (A.P.).—Pessimism tempered with hope and patience describes the Japanese attitude toword the London naval conference. Suspicion of other powers' motives, especially those of America and Great Britain, is reflected in newspaper comment.

Disappointment at failure of the Japanese delegates to achieve a preliminary agreement on cruiser ratios colors the whole Japanese outlook concerning the conference. Editors, therefore, are inclined to interpret American and British tactics as designed to thwart Japanese purposes.

An editorial in the Tokyo Asahi today is typical.

"The debate whether to consider capital ships and auxiliaries was the first avoidance of real issues," said the Asahi editorially. "The cruiser problem, which the conferees are afraid to tackle, would be simplified vastly if America abated her demands to lead the world in eight-inch gun cruisers."

Japan is directing only half her attention toward London, owing to general absorption in the parliamentary election.

The disposition in authoritative quarters is to consider public preoccupation with the election a good thing, preventing nationalistic demonstrations in connection with the London parley.

Japanese are comparatively uninterested in specific questions thus far discussed at the conference, except as related to the 70 per cent ratio question. Dispatches indicating that Great Britain and America are willing to consider a compromise between the French idea of global tonnage and the Anglo-American idea of specific categories has induced a degree of hopefulness here, dampened, however, when it was revealed that Great Britain was opposed to shifting tonnage from a smaller category to a larger, which leaves Japan's large cruiser problem unsolved.

Reds Rush India Liberty Meeting

Pull Independence Flags Off Platform and Decry Mahatma Ghandi.

Bombay, India, Jan. 26 (A.P.).—Three hundred Communist milliworkers rushed the platform at Chowpathy Sea Face today while a great crowd was holding an independence day meeting, pulling down the independence flags and sought to hoist the Red flag in its place.

A disorderly scene followed. Communists denounced Mahatma Ghandi for his "lukewarmish congressional program." Eventually the Communists were ejected. A number of women seated around the platform, among them the wife of Jawaharial Nehru, president of the Nationalist Congress, were rescued from their precarious positions by adherents of their faction.

This clash was the only serious one reported up to late tonight. British officials had awaited the Independence Day celebration with some trepidation and police everywhere had been greatly reinforced as a preventive of trouble.

Huge processions were held here and in New Delhi, Calcutta, Lahore and Ahmadabad.

Gulf Rum Seized By Patrol Crews

45-Foot Lugger Captured With Liquor and Alcohol Worth $35,000.

Biloxi, Miss., Jan. 26 (A.P.).—The Cecile S, 45-foot gasoline lugger, operating out of Pointe a la Hache, La., with a cargo of 800 cases of alcohol and 50 cases of assorted choice liquors, was seized by Coast Guard boats from the Biloxi base today in Chandeleur Sound. The boat and its cargo are valued at over $35,000.

Two men on the lugger were taken into custody. The seizure was made by the CG-301, in charge of Boatawain R. M. Sykes and the picket boat CG-2320, in charge of Okley Hardy, chief boatawain mate, after a chase in the Louisiana waters.

The boat, cargo and prisoners will be tken to New Orleans, where they will be turned over to customs authorities Monday.

Atlanta Citizens Join "To End Corruption"

Atlanta, Ga., Jan. 26 (A.P.).—A citizens' executive committee was under organization today with the announced dual purpose of ending "graft and corruption," and "to restore public confidence in the city government," while the Fulton County grand jury prepared to continue its investigation into alleged irregularities in the city hall.

Meanwhile seventeen charitable organizations were protesting their elimination from the 1930 finance sheet approved yesterday by Mayor I. N. Ragsdale. The grand jury last week asked that payments on park purchases be eliminated on the ground that they were illegal and "corrupt," and the city council replied not only by omitting these items but appropriations to charitable institutions as well.

Chicago, Jan. 26 (A.P.).—A slight improvement in the condition of the Most Rev. Charles Palmerstone Anderson, presiding bishop of the Episcopal Church in America, who has been critically ill since suffering a heart attack last Tuesday, was reported today.

The primate's blood pressure, which had been dangerously low, rose considerably today and his general condition was better, attending physicians reported.

WHEELER TO ASK DRY BUREAU FOR REPORT ON AGENT'S WORK

service following recurrent rumors of scandal in connection with his work.

Prior to his transfer to the Idaho-Montana district, Mr. Herbert was administrator for Maryland and the District of Columbia, and Mr. Quinn was his assistant here before he went to Idaho.

For more than two months there has been considerable mystery surrounding the Quinn case. When Mr. Herbert was sent to the Idaho-Montana district, the Prohibition Bureau announced that Mr. Quinn was being sent to Texas. Later, however, when Mr. Quinn came to Washington looking for a job, the bureau finally admitted he had been dismissed.

Senator Borah, of Idaho, likewise disclaimed acquaintance with Mr. Herbert or knowledge of his work, although he stated that he had heard persistent adverse reports. Both Senator Borah and Senator Wheeler stated emphatically that they oppose the sending of Eastern prohibition men to the Western districts, and declared, "There are plenty of men in the West who could and would enforce the prohibition law if the authorities wanted it enforced."

Referring to the Eastern prohibition officers sent West as "carpetbaggers," Senator Wheeler said he knew "many capable Western officers had made unsuccessful attempts to obtain prohibition jobs in the Western districts; therefore it was not a scarcity of officers which prompted the sending of Eastern men West."

Row On in Congress.

Meanwhile the prohibition controversy continues unabated in Congress with the wet and dry factions squaring away on recommendations of President Hoover and his Law Enforcement Commission. Part of the wet group also is determined to force a showdown from the commission on proposals for 2.75 beer.

Representative Dyer (Republican), of Missouri, author of a 2.75 per cent beverage measure, who discussed his proposal with the President last week, yesterday stated he would invite members of the Law Enforcement Commission before the House judiciary committee to express themselves on the modification issue.

Being the ranking Republican on the judiciary group, Mr. Dyer wields considerable authority, and he was confident that the commission members would appear before hte committee.

Fight on Port Officer.

Another prohibition showdown expected this week concerns the filling of the office of comptroller of customs for the Port of New York. Over the protest of the Antisaloon League, the two senators from New Jersey, bith Republicans, have recommended the reappointment of Col. Arthur F. Foran. The league charges Col. Foran with lax prohibition enforcement, and Col. Foran, who is a Catholic, maintains he is being opposed on religious grounds.

In the meantime, the House and Senate will go ahead this week with legislation urged by the President and the Enforcement Commission for strengthening the dry laws. These include the Williamson bill for transfer of the prohibition enforcement service from the Treasury to the Justice Department, which is urged by the administration. Attorney General Mitchell is expected to appear before the House expenditures committee today in connection with the measure. Repeated attempts by the wets during hearings on this bill to draw administration leaders into discussion of the merits of the dry law have proved futile. Their last reverse in this particular occurred last week when Mrs. Mabel Walker Willebrandt, former Assistant Attorney General in charge of prohibition, declared an invitation to appear before the committee.

Tariff Comes First.

While the Senate judiciary subcommittee considering prohibition legislation also expects to get into action this week, the dry fight in the Senate must inevtably awa final disposition of th tariff bill.

Accompanied by a statement con- and crimes of violence, a study of the the number of arrests for drunkenness tending Sweden has reduced by half Swedish system of handling alcoholic beverages was released last night by the Association Against the Prohibition Amendment.

In addition, the statement said, Sweden has reduced per capita consumption of liquor 35 per cent and is deriving revenues of more than $30,000,000 yearly from the trade.

At the same time, the board of temperance and public morals of the Methodist Episcopal Ghurch South assailed the "wet bloc" of the House as representing "alien sentiment" in its appeal for modification or repeal of the dry laws.

"Foreign Representatives" Hit.

The charge, made in the clipsheet of that organization, pointed out that its members come from New York, Chicago and a few other large cities.

"It appears that a small group, many of whom would not be in Congress at all but for the strange fact that aliens are allowed representation," the statement said, "is engaged in telling the American people that it can not make any law which is disapproved by colonies of the foreign-born and that it can not enforce such a law if and when it is made.

"It is a group movement, singularly lacking in numerical strength and in the moral support which comes from the enlistment of American principles. The character of its propaganda constitutes a direct and compelling challenge to a freedom-loving and ever-victorious people."

CURRENT EVENTS IN MARYLAND AND VIRGINIA

COLLEGE SITE STIRS WRANGLE IN VIRGINIA

Assembly May Dodge Issue of Women's Arts School Entirely, Is Fear.

FIVE CITIES SEEK FAVOR

Special to The Washington Post.

Richmond, Va., Jan. 26.—Location of the proposed Virginia Liberal Arts College for Women, offering women the same opportuntities for higher education which the University of Virginia offers to men, has created such a stir that many fear the present session of the General Assembly will adjourn without taking any definite action on establishment of the school.

Bills already are pending before the Legislature in behalf of its location at Charlottesville, Fredericksburg and Lynchburg. Advocates of Harrisonburg as a site are expected to introduce a bill this week, to be followed by Roanoke and Staunton.

Assemblymen Don't Want Row.

With such a conflict in progress, however, the educators fear that the General Assembly will merely pass over the question, hoping that public sentiment will crystallize in favor of one particular site before the Virginia Legislature convenes again in 1932. A canvass of the assembly reveals a majority in favor of the school for women, but the solons do not look with favor at becoming embroiled, at present, in a fight over the location of such a college.

The most complicating factor in the whole affair at present seems to be the unrelenting fight of women's organizations of the State to have the college located at Charlottesville, thus making the University of Virginia coeducational in its undergraduate schools.

University Flatly Opposed.

President Edward A. Alderman, the faculty, the alumni, the borad of visitors and the students of the university are just as determined that the Charlottesville institution shall not be opened to women as the women's organizations are thrt the university should be coeducational.

If the women lose and the university wins, the site battle will then be between Harrisonburg and Fredericksburg, which are offering their teachers' college sites, and Lynchburg, Staunton and Roanoke, which want the establishment of an entirely new institution, with the State appropriating funds for the purchase of a site and the construction of a plant.

Utilization of one of the teachers' college plants for the liberal arts college, advocates of this plan assert, will save the State a capital outlay of between $1,000,000 and $2,000,000.

Brickbats & Bouquets

By JAMES HAY, JR.

WHEN Representative Fish, of New York, lamented that American public speaking was "almost a lost art," he neglected to explain that this dearth of oratory, like a fast-traveling and devastating plague, has blanketed our extroverted republic in the astoundingly brief period of ten years.

Before prohibition became unfashionable a big dinner never lacked an outpouring of eloquence that made the gentlemen split throats and gloves in manifestation of delight, approval and encore.

After the third cocktail in those days the banqueters began to have a hunch that the honored guest would rise in his place at the destined hour and hold them in thrall with the beauty and profundity of his pronouncements. When the champagne had gone around, they were absolutely certain that the hunch was infallible. And by the time the coffee and liqueurs had done their inspiring work the air was full of cries for a speech.

* * * *

THAT was the charmed moment when everybody knew that every woman was lovely, no matter how hideous, and every man a wit, no matter how dumb.

As for the featured speaker, he had everything in his favor. The mounting and magic tide of alcohol had broken down his inhibitions, as the Freudians say; he was no longer wondering whether the set of his tie was meticulously correct; he was drawing strongly upon his subconscious mind for that inspiration which lifts a man to the singing hights of powerful and pellucid enunciation.

* * * *

HE gazed into faces which, though a trifle vacant, were lit up with the glow of joyful anticipation. He saw on every side the resolute determination to listen and to be charmed. Since oratory is a collaboration between speaker and victim, he naturally in such an encouraging setting cut loose with jokes, jabs and gesticulations, which in less than three minutes had the boys pounding the table and growing apoplectic of countenance. The speech was a constant, unqualified uproarious and unprecedented hit.

* * * *

BUT today? By the time the so-called orator gets heavily to his feet, the diners are sleepy, bored and surreptitiously looking at their watches, wondering how soon they can escape the dreary maunderings of a luckiless wretch whose address is all cluttered up with inhibitions, babblings, bunk and balbucinations.

The poor devil tells a joke doomed to failure by his fear that everybody has heard it before. He gets off something, which, though it was pure gold in the privacy of his study, is indisputably claptrap and balderdash when launched against that forbidding layout of dumbells and dormice. Then, trying to seem unself-conscious, but looking like a villain, who has recently cut seven throats and scuttled nine ships full of women and children, he sits down amid applause that sounds more like a dirge than an ovation.

Whatever may be the merits and demerits of prohibition, it has decimated, massacred and just about exterminated the fellows who rivaled Demosthenes, Cicero and Bill Dwyer's hero.

AGITATION CHARGES ANSWERED BY GREEN

Labor Chief Says Federation Would Have Prevented Marion Deaths.

SPEAKS IN RICHMOND

Richmond, Va., Jan. 26 (A.P.).—William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, in an address, "The Aims and Purposes of the American Federation of Labor in the South," here this afternoon, said that if the federation had been in North Carolina communities, during the recent period of industrial trouble, "those tragedies would not have occurred."

He referred to criticism brought against the federation charging it with agitation, and said, "we were not in Marion, N. C., when six lives were lost, and not in Gastonia when an officer of the law was killed. The 5,000,000 members of the federation can not be called agitators."

The address was opened by Mr. Green with what he called the "new economic philosophy," one of the federation objectives. This, he said, was greater production, better wages for the workingman and a chance to enjoy what he has bought.

Concerning the increasing industrialization of the South, President Green referred to the change from the old order of agriculture, saying "the South has found itself," and prophesying that in a short time the South will be a "beehive" of industry.

This condition, he said, will cause problems that can be dealt with by organized labor only, and that the federation desired to assist the Southern worker in solving the problems to his satisfaction.

President Green was welcomed here by Lieut. Gov. James H. Price, representing Gov. John Garland Pollard.

DR. PHENIX IS NAMED HAMPTON PRINCIPAL

Acting Head's Appointment Announced at Institute Founders' Day.

YALE PRESIDENT TALKS

Special to The Washington Post.

Hampton Institute, Va., Jan. 26.—Appointment of Dr. George P. Phenix, acting principal, to the principalship of Hampton Institute was announced last night in Ogden Hall by George Foster Peabody, senior member of the board of trustees of Hampton Institute, at the annual founders' day historical meeting of the Armstrong League.

The announcement, following the successful administration of the school by Dr. Phenix during a critical period and atey his 25 years of service, met no tonly the hearty approval of old and new workers, but of the student body. Mr. Peabody, in behalf of the board of trustees, presented Dr. Phenix with a silver loving cup. Dr. Phenix was also elected a trustee to fill the vacancy left by the resignation of former Principal Dr. James E. Gregg.

Dr. Phenix was born in Portland, Me., in 1864 and was graduated from Colby College in 1886. After study and active work in education he became principal of the State Normal School, Williamantic, Conn., where his work attracted the attention of Dr. Hollis B. Frissell, then principal of Hampton Institute, who induced Dr. Phenix to join him in the pioneer educational undertaking at Hampton. As head of the academy he organized the work in teacher training and was, in 1904, made vice principal. His outstanding contribution to Hampton and to the South lies in his administration of the Hampton summer school, where hundreds of teachers have reflected the professional advantages gained under his direction in hundreds of Southern communities.

Announcement also was made by Mr. Peabody of the election of Daniel W. Armstrong, son of Gen. Samuel Chapman Armstrong, the founder of Hampton Institute, to its board of trustees. Mr. Armstrong spent his boyhood on the campus, later entering and graduating from the United States Naval Academy in the class of 1915. He is a member of the New York Stock Exchange.

The annual founders' day address was delivered this morning in Memorial Church by Dr. James R. Angell, president of Yale University, who paid tribute to the vision and energy of the founder of Hampton Institute. Trustees present at the midwinter meeting were Clarence H. Kelsey, New York; George Foster Peabody, New York; Charles E. Bigelow, New York; Arthur Curtis James, New York; William Jay Schieffelin, New York; Frank W. Darling, Hampton, Va.; Chester B. Emerson, Detroit; Henry Wilder Foote, Campridge; J. Henry Scattergood, Philadelphia; Samuel C. Mitchell, Richmond; W Cameron Forbes, Boston; Alexander B. Trowbridge, Washington. Chief Justice William Howard Taft, chairman of the Hampton board of trustees, was prevented from attending by his illness, as was also Dr. Francis G. Peabody, of Cambridge, Mass.

AUTO SHOW ENTERS ON FULL WEEK RUN

Special Traffic System Is Used to Regulate Flow of Visitors.

BAND IS DAILY FEATURE

Formally thrown open to the public Saturday evening, when thousands of motor enthusiasts visited the Washington Auditorium, the National Capital's tenth annual automobile show today entered upon a week's run, with the doors opening at 10 a. m. and closing at 10:30 p. m. daily.

Months of preparation by the show committee of the Washington Automotive Trade Association, under whose auspices this annual event is produced, bore fruit at the formal opening. There had been unceasing effort to surpass the decorative background of previous shows, and when the crowd beheld the striking modernistic setting in which the striking automobiles of the new season were displayed there was general agreement that a new high water mark of beauty had been achieved by the show.

Special traffic arrangements regulate the flow of the crowds through the two spacious auditorium floors so that all are afforded an opportunity to inspect the gleaming new models in full comfort. In so doing the visitors will find the show replete with surprises for in almost every one of the 37 lines of automobiles shown there are improvements which at the time of last year's show represented merely hopes. There are fully 150 types of cars on display and without exception they demonstrate that engineers and designers have achieved in their new products not only better-looking and more efficient vehicles but styles which are adapted to all the many diverse uses of automobiles in modern everyday life.

The show is enlivened by band music which will continue a daily feature of the show all this week. And in addition to the car exhibits, which bear virtually all nameplates familiar to the motor public there are displays of all the leading shop equipment, accessories and services which are indispensable if the full pleasure and safety of driving is to be achieved.

"What Makes the New Cars Safe" is the subject of a talk to be given at 7:10 o'clock this evening on Station WMAL by Frank G. Stewart, member of the show committee of the W. A. T. A.

Spanish Pistol Stolen, Holdup Soon Follows

Theft of a pistol and the holdup of a belated homegoer followed in rapid sequence early yesterday morning.

The pistol, a Spanish automatic, was stolen from the home of Benjamin B. Hunt, of 3332 Thirty-sixth street northwest. The man held up was John Montgomery, of East Riverdale, Md. He was stopped on Sixth street between I and K streets northeast and robbed of $2. Montgomery told police that he could not decribe the pistol used by the robber, but he was able to give a description of the man.

Zimmerman Is Named Orphan Asylum Chief

William C. Zimmerman has been chosen president of the German Orphan Asylum. Other officers are G. W. Brahler, first vice president; F. W. Schneider, second vice president; Rudolph Santleman, secretary, and E. A. Tripp, treasurer.

Directors are Phil Dittes, Dr. George H. Becker, G. W. Brahler, Karl Egolf, F. W. Schneider, James Keller, E. A. Tripp, Theodore Dietrich, C. F. Jacobsen, Henry Alhof and A. P. Jouas.

School Thief Steals Cash and Equipment

The Blow School, at Nineteenth street and Benning road northeast, was broken into over the week end and an undetermined amount of cash and equipment was reported to have been stolen.

Entrance was gained by breaking a window. The robbery was reported to Ninth Precinct police by Thomas Dore, of 1649 Gales street northeast, the janitor.

CAMERA PRIZE WON BY ARMY OFFICER

tensive notes on altitude conditions affecting airplane flight.

Stevens, on Inauguration Day, made the first night photographs of the Capitol and White House in Washington. Using powerful flares dropped from his plane and timed to flash at a predetermined altitude and time, so as to coincide with the best exposure of his photographic plate, Stevens obtained photographs which for clarity of detail surpassed many daylight efforts.

The distance photograph of Mount Rainier was made on a 14,000-mile aerial photographic tour of the Northwest. In addition to this picture, he obtained a great number of scenic photographs which are ranked as some of the most beautiful ever made, whether from the air or on the ground.

Commenting on Stevens' achievements, Maj. Gen. Fecht, chief of the Air Corps, noted that "it is typical of him that last summer, in attempting to shield an intricate aerial camera from a fall, he took a bad fall himself and broke his arm rather than allow one of his cameras to suffer harm."

Capt. Stevens is stationed at Wright Field, Dayton, Ohio. Born in Maine, his home is at Grimes Pass, Idaho.

ILLNESS IS FATAL TO W. G. NEUMEYER

Vice President of Motor Company and Life-Long Resident Here Dies.

RITES TO BE TOMORROW

William G. Neumeyer, 43, of 3608 Thirty-fifth street northwest, vice president of the Neumeyer Motor Co., Inc., died at his home yesterday morning after a lingering illness of about six months.

A native and lifelong resident of Washington, Mr. Neumeyer was educated in local schools and at St. John's College. Prior to entering the automobile business five years ago he was in the hardware and implement business. He was a devout Catholic, a member of the Elks Club and several other fraternal and civic organizations.

He is survived by his widow, Mrs. Gertrude Conlon Neumeyer; a 3-year-old daughter, Mary Virginia; two sisters, Elizabeth and Ada Lee Neumeyer, and a brother, Edwin H. Neumeyer, who is president of the Neumeyer Motor Co.

Requiem mass will be said at St. Ann's Catholic Church, of which Mr. Neumeyer was a member, at 10 o'clock tomorrow morning, and interment will follow at Congressional Cemetery.

FRED S. CAWSON DIES.

Veteran of Government Printing Office Is Stricken Suddenly.

Fred S. Cawson, 71 years old, of the Government Printing Office, died suddenly yesterday morning at his residence, 1014 Massachusetts avenue northeast. A native of Isle of Wight County, Va., he came to Washington in 1885 to enter the Government Printing Office. Later he was employed successively in the Syracuse (N. Y.) Post, the Washington Times and The Washington Post. He returned to his first position in 1915.

Mr. Cawson was active in the Ryland Methodist Episcopal Church and was a member of the Dawson Lodge, No. 16, F. A. A. M.; Washington Naval Chapter, No. 6, R. A. M.; Orient Commandery, No. 5, K. T.; the Trestleboard Masonic Club, and the Martha Chapter, No. 4, O. E. S.

He is survived by his widow, Mrs. Annie V. Cawson; two brothers, Robert Cawson, of Richmond, Va., and Charles Cawson, of this city, and a sister, Mrs. Anna Tolson, of Richmond.

Man Severely Injured When Struck by Brick

Struck on the head with a brick during an altercation, Louis Mitchell, colored, 39 years old, of Q street near Fourth street northwest, was possibly fatally injured yesterday morning. He was taken to Freedmen's Hospital, where he was reported to be suffering from severe skull injuries, lacerations of the scalp and a fractured nose.

Second Precinct police reported that the assailant was Wilson Murray, colored, 25 years old, of Congress court northwest. Murray was being sought by police last night. The altercation occurred in Congress court.

Theologian Raps Bill for Blue Law

Measure to Close District Theaters on Sunday Called Sectarian.

Representative Lankford's bill, aiming for the closing of all theaters in the District on Sundays, was denounced last night as a species of religious legislation by Dr. B. G. Wilkinson, dean of theology of the Washington Missionary College.

Dr. Wilkinson told his listeners at the L'Aigion Auditorium that the country is not founded on religious observances. The Lankford bill, he said, is sectarian in character, since it aims only to close the theaters on Sundays. Mohammedans observe on Friday and Jews on Saturday, he said, and the bill, in substance, is a species of sectarian law. Passage of such a measure, he averred, would be fundamentally a union of church and state.

He further said that the bill presented a new danger to religious liberty in America and pointed out that there had been an unusually strong tendency, in recent years, to force religious legislation on the people.

Dr. A. W. Truman, medical director of the Washington Sanitarium and Hospital, also spoke at the lectures which were given under the auspices of the Missionary College.

NAVAL VETERAN DIES AT AGE OF 84 YEARS

lantic Torpedo Boat Flotilla in the war with Spain.

The single ships he commanded at various times were the Caesar, Glacier, Supply, Vixen, Concord, Wheeling, Abarenda, Alert and New Jersey. He was on the boards of construction and of examination and retirement from 1907 to 1909. He was selected to command the Nicaraguan Expeditionary Squadron on December 1, 1909.

Retired in 1909.

The rear admiral was retired according to the law at the age of 62 on January 9, 1910, but he remained in active command until the withdrawal of the Nicaraguan squadron in April of the same year. He was relieved from active duty June 1, 1910.

He was the senor officer at the time and was awarded the medal for the second action at Matanzas bar for Santiago, medal for the Spanish-American War.

Admiral Kimball was a member of the Loyal Legion, Society of American Wars, Aero Club and the National Geographic Society. The clubs in which he was enrolled are the Metropolitan (Washington), the New York Yacht and the Army and Navy Club of America (New York).

Wrote Many Articles.

Despite an active life in naval service, Admiral Kimball found time to do a great deal of writing for divers publications. He was a contributor to Harper's, Scribner's, Forum and London Engineering and Service publications. He was the author of Our Question of Questions: Arm or Disarm?"

Recalled to active duty during the World War as president of the board for examination of officers and as officer in charge of the historical section office of operations, Navy Department, he again rendered valuable service to his country.

Admiral Kimball had the reputation of never commanding an inefficient or an unhappy ship. On August 31, 1925, at Augusta, Me., he was unanimously elected president of the Maine Three Quarter Century Club.

Surviving is the widow, who before her marriage on July 18, 1882, was Miss Esther Smith Spencer, of Maryland.

Interment will be temporarily at Arlington Cemetery, but later the body will be buried at his other home, Old Brick, at Paris, Me.

Disabled Veteran Receives Tribute

Former Hospital Corps Member Gets Copy of Citation.

Francis DeS. Kavanagh, of 2610 Monroe street northeast, a disabled World War veteran, who served with the Mobile Hospital No. 1, has received from his former commanding officer, Col. Donald Macrae, jr., of Council Bluffs, Iowa, an autographed copy of the citation and croix de guerre with silver star awarded the hospital by the French.

The citation recites how the hospital treated a number of French wounded soldiers during the bombardment at Coulommiers and Chateau Thierry and later during the Meuse-Argonne at Fromerville. Col. Macrae adds a tribute in which he says Mr. Kavanagh "helped make possible the reception of this citation."

The veteran, disabled by tuberculosis, attributed to his war experience, is a member of the Ace-Rasmussen Chapter No. 1, Disabled American Veterans.

Other officers chosen were Morris Stein, house chairman; Bernard Danzansky, Morris Garfinckle and Harry Sherby, trustees, and D. J. Kaufman, Maurice E. Mazo, William Levy, M. S. Cohen, Miss A. Backenheimer, B. Hayman, Lee Baumgartner, Louis J Raebach, Jack Veaux and Sherry Stein, directors for three years.

Mr. Goldsmith urged support of the Community Chest.

Payne to Be Feted By Red Cross Staff

Seventy-fifth Birthday of Chairman Occasion for Dinner Tonight.

John Barton Payne, chairman of the American Red Cross, will be honored at a dinner tonight at the Willard Hotel by the staff and personnel of the Red Cross to mark his seventy-fifth birthday. Yesterday was actually the anniversary and congratulatory messages were sent to Judge Payne from all parts of the world.

Speakers at the dinner will be Silas H. Strawn, of Chicago, former president of the American Bar Association and former partner of Judge Payne; and Miss Mabel T. Boardman, secretary of the American Red Cross. James L. Fieser, vice president of the Red Cross, will be toastmaster.

Among the distinguished guests will be Acting Secretary of State Joseph P. Cotton, Gen. John J. Pershing, of the Red Cross board of incorporators; Ogden L. Mills, Undersecretary of the Treasury, treasurer of the Red Cross; Charles Evans Hughes, jr., solicitor general; Cornelius N. Bliss, Maj. Gen. M. W. Ireland, Gustavius D. Pope and Rear Admiral Charles E. Riggs, all of the central committee. Other members of the board of incorporators expected are Admiral William S. Benson, Senator Arthur Capper, Gen. James A. Drain and William Fortune, of Indianapolis.

Sermon Is Delivered By Maj. Gen. Everson

Maj. Gen. William G. Everson, head of the militia bureau, and pastor emeritus of a Muncie, Ind., church, delivered the sermon at services last night in the North Baptist Memorial Church.

The speaker declared that there was room in Washington for a real live church. He hoped, he said, that he would see the day when crowds were being turned away from church because of the packed buildings. Maj. Gen. Everson was in the service during the World War and is prominent in the American Legion.

Birdshot Greets 'Panther' On Return to Old Haunts

Washington's mysterious "panther" apparently has come back to the scene of his original activities in the Northeast section.

Edward Smith, of 800 Castle place northeast, reported he saw the beast early yesterday morning and fired at him with a shotgun. Awakened about 1 o'clock by the barking of his three dogs, Mr. Smith said he opened the window and looked out. With a bright moon shining, he stated, he could plainly see the animal, which was just outside the woven wire fence around his yard. Even after he had raised his window, Mr. Smith said, the beast did not run and continued to snarl and claw at the dogs which were inside the yard.

Hastily getting his gun, he fired at the beast, which was only about 25 feet away. Although he is sure he hit it, Mr. Smith said he had only birdshot in his gun and did not kill the animal. When he fired the beast fled.

Mr. Smith said the animal was larger than a dog, and had large flapping ears. He is convinced it was the "panther" which has terrorized northeast Washington and southern Maryland for more than two weeks. The tracks, he said, measured five inches from heel to toe.

Junior League Magazine Puts Aviation First

February Issue Devotes Much Space to Girls Who Fly Their Own.

By JEAN ELIOT.

THE Junior League has gone air-minded with a vengeance, the February issue of its monthly magazine being a perfectly corking aviation number. And the organization evidently recognizes Washington's claim to being a center of authentic information on the engrossing subject of man's conquest of the air since articles by several well-known Washingtonians are featured.

In "Women and Aviation" Mr. Burnette Wright has contributed an engrossing piece on petticoated fliers from the authoritative standpoint of a man who was himself a flier, with an enviable war record, and who is now manager of the Curtiss Aeroplane and Motor Co. in Washington. Maj. Burdette Shields Wright, as we knew him in his Army days, was not only frequently stationed in Washington while in the service, but he married a Washington girl, Miss Elizabeth Campbell, daughter of former Representative and Mrs. Philip Pitt Campbell.

Another contributor is Marcia Delano, wife of Commander Harvey Delano, United States Navy. The Delanos are now stationed in Washington, where Mrs. Delano, as Miss Marcia Murdock, was a belle in her girlhood days, her father, Mr. Victor Murdock, having a long record of service in official life. Mrs. Delano's subject is "Traveling the New Trail to Wichita," in which she tells of a flight from St. Louis to Wichita. Flying is no new experiment for her, as she has traveled much by air in Europe. She has also had some experience in writing, with an article "How to be Chic in the Air," recently published in Harper's Bazaar. Moreover, she comes naturally by a fluent pen, her father being widely known as a writer.

Col. Breckenridge Tells Experiences as Passenger.

Col. Henry Breckenridge is represented by an article, "Let Her Fly," telling of his experiences as a passenger with some famous pilots and some not so famous. He is identified in the "Table of Contents" as "Col. Lindbergh's lawyer," but he needs no identification in Washington, having served for some years as Assistant Secretary of War and having later practiced law here, although at present he is living in New York.

Stunning pictures taken from the air, photographs of airports and famous fliers—among them Capt. John O. Donaldson, organizer of the Newark Air Service, a famous war-time ace and a son of Brig. Gen. and Mrs. T. Q. Donaldson, sometime of Washington—deck the Junior League's aviation number, as well as photographs of Junior League girls, who are licensed pilots, in their flying togs. There are also articles by Junior League members who are fliers..

Other Interests Also Get Space in Current Issue.

Lest all this aviation matter prove too technical for the general reader, the magazine contains departments devoted to art, music, the drama, the "cinema" and books. Alice Stanley Acheson (Mrs. Dean Acheson), of Washington, contributes an article on our own Phillips Memorial Gallery. Lydia Chapin Kirk, who was Lydia Chapin, of Washington, and is now Mrs. Allan Kirk, wife of Commander Kirk, U. S. N., stationed at Newport, writes entertainingly on "The Book Case," and Eleanor Hard has a prohibition piece, very cleverly written, called "Behind the Dry Line." Both Mrs. Kirk and Miss Hard are regular contributors to the magazine.

Eleanor Hard, who now has a job in New York, is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Hard, of Washington. She comes of writing stock, the names of William Hard and Anne Hard being constantly seen in current newspapers and periodicals. Mr. and Mrs. Hard are now in London covering the arms conference for various publications, and Mr. Hard, it will be remembered, has been broadcasting the sessions of the conference over the short wave length to be picked up in this country.

Your Greatest Chance to Win in the Post's Great

$20,000 Opportunity Campaign

If you enter without delay you will earn 5,000 votes on your nomination blank alone. If you turn in your First Subscription NOW, you will earn a special bonus of 25,000 EXTRA VOTES. The regular Votes, per the scale, remain the same throughout the campaign! And NOW, as explained on this page, New subscriptions are worth 100,000 Extra Votes per every $20—which is MORE VOTES than they will earn at any later stage of the campaign! The votes you earn on your nomination blank and the subscriptions you secure will alone determine the place you reach among the winners, and naturally, you should endeavor to earn the ABSOLUTE MAXIMUM VOTES, obtainable on both your nomination and your subscriptions. RIGHT NOW, during this period, is the only time you can do that. Remember, it doesn't cost a cent to enter, to compete, or to win! All that is needed is a few hours of pleasant, spare time effort—and the sooner you act, the quicker you can win. Turn in your nomination blank TODAY. Everybody wins! There will be no losers and no regrets. Visit the automobile and radio dealers and see the splendid prizes, "28 of 'em," then visit The Post Building and enter the race. It's YOUR opportunity. THIS IS ENTRY WEEK!

See the Big Prizes at the Auto Show and at Atwater-Kent and Majestic Radio Dealers.

Hood College Club Here To Be President's Guests.

The Hood College Club of Washington will be entertained on Saturday afternoon, February 1, at the home of the president, Mrs. Edwin C. Dutton, 7 Hesketh street, Chevy Chase, Md., from 3 to 5 o'clock. Miss Sara C. Lovejoy, dean of Hood College, and Miss Mary Grace Helfenstein, secretary of the alumnae council, are expected from Frederick, Md., to be the particular guests of the occasion. The club officers who will assist Mrs. Dutton are Miss Isabel Neely, Miss Dora Hughes, and Miss Dorothy Thomas. Those of the Hood undergraduates to be entertained are Miss Grace Dutton, Miss Elizabeth Orth, Miss Elizabeth Wanner and Miss Margaret Plummer.

Vice President's Party To Attend Bal Boheme.

For the first time in the history of the Bal Boheme the Vice President of the United States will be a guest at the ball. Vice President Curtis and his party, including Mr. and Mrs. Edward Everett Gann and Mrs. Charles P. George, will attend the brilliant carnival of the arts tonight as the guests of the Arts Club. They will arrive at a quarter before 11 o'clock and will be met at the main entrance of the ballroom by the floor committee with a former president of the club, Dr. Frederick V. Coville, as chairman, and will be ceremoniously escorted to their box, which is located adjacent to that of the judges and the chairman and vice chairman of the ball.

Immediately after the arrival and seating of the vice presidential party the big stunt of the ball, "The Adventurer," will be presented. It is expected that the Vice President will remain until after the grand march at midnight.

The continued demand for tickets for tonight led Mrs. John Otto Johnson, chairman of the ball committee, to announce that after 6 o'clock tickets will be on sale only at the Willard and at the door of the ballroom at the hour of the ball. The ball opens at 10 o'clock. A committee of Arts Club members, headed by Miss Myra Hendley, will be in charge of the sale, at nominal fees, of costume accessories, for the convenience of belated guests who may not have donned fancy dress for the occasion.

It is reached by going out Connecticut avenue to one block north of Chevy Chase Club and then to Rosemary street. Orville L. Rice is the builder of the house which is furnished and decorated by W. B. Moses & Sons.

Fifth Ave. Fashions NEW YORK

ADORABLE lounging pajamas that are so comfy for bedtime that will instantly appeal to the little subdeb because they are just like older sister's pajamas.

They are made of printed sateen in bois de rose tones with plain satin trim.

The pajamas with quite full legs have a sleeveless slip-on jumper. The jacket is in the fashionable fingertip length with becoming rolled neckline. It has large patch pockets.

Style No. 8293 is exceptionally easy to make. It comes in sizes 6, 8, 10, 12 and 14 years. In the 8 years size, 3¼ yards of 39-inch material with ⅝ yard of 39-inch contrasting, is sufficient.

They are lovely for "best" with the pajama pants and coat of orange crepe de chine with the jumper in yellow crepe, with the trimming bands of the yellow crepe.

Cotton crepe in orchid print used for jacket and pants with plain orchid jumper is cute.

Peach colored pongee jumper with nile green pants and jacket is most unusual.

Crepe satin, novelty rayon crepes, batiste, linen, chambray and dimity appropriate.

All patterns of Lucille Lorraine styles are 15 cents each. Mail your order to our Fashion Department, Washington Post, 259 Fifth avenue, New York City. Be sure to write your name and address clearly and give the number and size of the pattern.

BE FAIR TO YOURSELF

Printers Support Local Business — They Should Receive the Same Support

The short-sighted policy of merchants who send their printing work to cities other than the one in which they conduct business is beyond human conjecture. This error in business judgment is doubly emphasized when the practice is indulged in by quasi-public enterprises, universities or similar institutions. There can be no excuse in the latter case, as the money expended for work of this character is drawn from public funds or contributions from members of the community. A plea might be made that a saving in cost enters the matter, but that saving, if any, would be so slight that the plea is in itself evidence of the error.

Reverse the situation. If workers in a community found it expedient to purchase supplies, clothing and other necessities in adjacent centers, what would be the effect on the local business community? Yet this course would seem just as logical as the one complained of. Spending money earned at home is one of the main factors in the industrial prosperity of a community and all its residents.

BEWARE THE COUGH FROM COLDS THAT HANG ON

Coughs from colds may lead to serious trouble. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a medical discovery with two-fold action; it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and inhibits germ growth.

Of all known drugs creosote is recognized by high medical authorities as one of the greatest healing agencies for coughs from colds and bronchial irritations. Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the inflamed membranes and stop the irritation, while the creosote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and checks the growth of the germs.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of coughs from colds, bronchitis and minor forms of bronchial irritations, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or flu. Money refunded if not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist. (adv.)

Each day beginning today and ending Saturday, Mr. Work will present three specially prepared hands. He will ask one or more questions about the play of each hand. Answers can be made in a word or two. Record your answers on a sheet of paper and preserve them. Next week beginning Monday, and each day thereafter, Mr. Work will answer the questions asked on the corresponding day this week. His replies will unfold a wealth of bridge knowledge.

The Problems presented will be those you meet in regular play
The Answers given will greatly increase your skill

Compete With Your Friends

Phone your friends and arrange matches. It's great sport.

You need never leave your fireside to get the fun and pleasure this contest offers. Everything comes to you right in this newspaper. Your friends get it in the same place. Arrange matches with members of your family and as many friends as you wish. Just challenge them to see who can correctly answer the most questions. Then watch for Mr. Work's replies and check yours against his. Loads of fun while you increase your skill.

Challenge your friends. See who can correctly answer most questions.

UP TO MACDONALD.

The time is at hand for Prime Minister MacDonald to make good his promise to agree to cruiser parity with the United States.

In Washington he said: "Parity? Take it with both hands, in full measure and overflowing."

In London he tries to evade the cruiser question by thrusting forward a proposal to abolish battleships. When this is rejected he urges extension of replacement of battleships and lays stress upon "economy" as the main object of the London conference.

Secretary Stimson on his way to London began to applaud the MacDonald plan for sidestepping cruiser parity and stressing "economy" as the watchword at London.

Senator Robinson and Secretary Adams called a halt upon this proposed abandonment of the American program. During the past week these two delegates insisted that the United States should demand first consideration of the cruiser question, and they have won. So Premier MacDonald will be confronted this week by the American demand for a showdown on the question of cruisers.

The British public and the dominions are beginning to call Mr. MacDonald to account. They have been kept in the dark on the cruiser question. Spokesmen for the navy at home and in the dominions assert that Mr. MacDonald is speaking wildly when he proposes that the empire shall have a maximum of only 50 cruisers. They insist that the food supply of Great Britain would be imperiled by such a drastic cut in cruiser power, and that the security of the dominions would be endangered. Mr. MacDonald spent Saturday with delegates from the dominions, some of whom have been instructed to stand firmly against cruiser reduction. The spokesman for Australia makes pointed references to Japan's demand for more cruisers and reminds the British prime minister that Australia intends to remain a white man's country.

The fact that Mr. MacDonald is trying to shuffle away from a discussion of cruisers is taken in some quarters as proof that he has played politics from the start and has never intended to agree to cruiser parity. In Great Britain, however, Mr. MacDonald is widely criticized as an impractical dreamer who really believes that war is now outlawed and that the empire can afford to lop off its naval defenses. Whether he is a politician or a dreamer, or a mixture of both, he is in hot water. On the one hand he is called upon to make good his assurances to the United States, and on the other he is warned not to make an agreement that would put an end to British supremacy over the United States in sea power.

Apparently both Mr. MacDonald and Mr. Stimson have indulged in the delightful mutual dream of a "new order," to be put into effect by the "joint policy" of Great Britain and the United States, and they are now rudely awakened by stern realities. The first reality encountered by Mr. Stimson upon arriving in London was the discovery that the other powers were preparing to block Anglo-American "joint policy" on all questions. Mr. Stimson spent several days in tearing down the "joint policy" scaffolding that had been so carefully raised in Washington. Before the conference can make any headway at all the powers must be convinced that the MacDonald-Stimson dream is a dream and nothing more. Perhaps they are now reassured that there is no Anglo-American joint policy—and perhaps they are not.

The only joint policy favored by the American people, so far as Great Britain is concerned, is equality of naval strength. A mere saving of money by deferring battleship construction does not mean equality and will not be acceptable. Now that the nations have been thrust into a position where they must have a showdown on naval matters, Americans expect the American delegation to come home with an agreement bearing the signature of the great powers, guaranteeing that the United States Navy shall have no superior in any class of ships.

WHAT ARE RAILROADS WORTH?

Following the O'Fallon decision, in which the Supreme Court held that the Interstate Commerce Commission had not given "due consideration to all the elements of value recognized by the law of the land for rate-making purposes," Senator Howell introduced a resolution directing the commission to make all future valuations according to the formula that prevailed in the O'Fallon case, which the Supreme Court found not in accord with the law. The commission opposes this resolution on the ground that it would force the commission to follow a method that has been found inconsistent with its duties under the law. At the same time, in a letter directed to Senator Couzens, the commission suggested that Congress should work out a formula by which "fair value" and "fair return" could be measured. The following formula was suggested:

> Up-to-date valuations at any time would be determined by taking the "cost of reproduction new" at 1914 unit prices of the property existing on the original valuation date, plus the then value of the lands, adding or subtracting the subsequent net increase or decrease in the property investment account as shown by the accounts when correctly kept, adding further a proper allowance for working capital, and deducting the balance standing in the depreciation reserve.

Since the commission is opposed to the Howell resolution on the ground that it would specify employment of a method inconsistent with the law, presumably suggested formula is held to be in harmony with the law. If so, why should Congress be asked to specify the formula? The method to be followed in making valuations is an administrative matter. The commission already has full authority to work out its method. Under any circumstances, whether the formula adopted were sanctioned by Congress or not, if it should not afford adequate protection to the railroads it would not be approved by the Supreme Court.

REAR ADMIRAL KIMBALL.

The country can ill afford to lose such sons as Rear Admiral William W. Kimball, U. S. N., retired, who died yesterday at his home in Washington. He was a scion of sturdy Maine stock, a natural seaman of the antique American type. From the time of his graduation from the Naval Academy in 1869 until his death he was devoted to the Navy, and served it in all grades and in all seas. He was torpedo officer of the first two torpedo craft of the Navy, and designed, constructed and operated the first armed cars ever used by United States forces. Taking up submarine development, he became a foremost expert in that field, besides organizing the first torpedo boat flotilla of the Navy.

Admiral Kimball commanded the Nicaraguan expeditionary squadron in 1909-1910, when he reached the age limit and was retired. During the late war he was called to active duty as president of the officers' examination board and as officer in charge of the historical section, Office of Naval Operations. For many years Admiral Kimball contributed to the press and to service publications. He was keenly interested in public questions, and from long and varied experience and study he drew valuable lessons which helped to shape American policy. In polemics he was a redoubtable antagonist, but his pungent wit carried no sting of malice. Naval officers and jurists acknowledged his high rank as an expounder of international and maritime law.

In social life Admiral Kimball was a delightful companion. Hosts of friends mourn his departure and extend condolence to his devoted wife.

THE BICENTENNIAL CELEBRATION.

Little progress has been made toward working out a detailed program for the celebration in 1932 of the 200th anniversary of the birth of George Washington. A memorial boulevard to Mount Vernon will be dedicated at that time. Wakefield, Washington's birthplace, will, it is hoped, have been restored. Nation-wide cooperation in a series of local celebrations has been bespoken. But no satisfactory suggestion for an appropriate nation-wide celebration has as yet been brought forward, and the bicentennial year is but 23 months off.

The decision of the bicentennial commission, reached last week, to appoint a general manager to direct the celebration, is worthy of approval. If a capable executive can be obtained and if he is given free rein to work out a comprehensive plan he should be able to get the necessary preparatory work under way at a date early enough to assure the kind of celebration that is called for. A commission, with its divided authority and cumbrous method of reaching decisions, is not fitted to carry forward a task of this nature. The important consideration is that a person of broad vision and proved ability shall be prevailed upon to assume the responsibility of directing the Washington celebration.

NEW YORK'S FOREST PLAN.

If the plans submitted to the New York State Legislature by the conservation committee should be adopted, a 1,000,000 acre forest will remove future worry over a shortage in lumber. The plan, which calls for expenditures of $20,000,000 over a fifteen-year period, 1930 to 1944 inclusive, is the largest yet proposed for the development of public forests for commercial use.

The execution of this program would mean the acquisition by the State of unused farm lands and the improvement of woodlot areas which have been neglected. It is estimated that with the 1,000,000-acre plan and the municipal, county and private forest plantings, about one-half of the State's land will be forest within the next 20 years. The State's area of 30,000,000 acres consists of 40 per cent forest lands and 60 per cent non-forest lands at the present time. The legislative plan calls for an expenditure of $500,000 in 1930 and 1931, increasing to $1,000,000 in 1932, and thence rising at the rate of $200,000 yearly until a maximum of $3,000,000 is reached in 1937.

If this plan for reforestation in New York is carried out the State will have an adequate supply of lumber on hand to satisfy the demands of practically all industries within the State.

At the present rate of consumption throughout the United States, a lumber shortage is inevitable unless the States adopt replanting systems. New York's plan is apparently well conceived. Other States would do well to devise methods of covering waste lands with forests.

DR. WILLIAM TINDALL.

During the 52 years in which the District government has been established in its present form, Dr. William Tindall, now clerk in charge of the information bureau in the District Building, has been in its service. For many years he was secretary to the Board of Commissioners. Under provisions of law Dr. Tindall must be retired within the next few months.

Despite his age, Dr. Tindall is most active, mentally and physically. He possesses a knowledge of District affairs far greater than that of any other official of the local government. Dr. Tindall should not be shelved because of the arbitrary provisions of the retirement act. He is far too valuable as an employe to be removed from his present position.

Congress should be asked to insert a provision in the pending appropriation bill exempting Dr. Tindall from the provisions of the retirement act so long as he is able to perform his duties.

A woman's federation urges a ban on toy soldiers on the ground that they stir up militaristic instincts. Shouldn't there also be a ban on the feeding of babies from milk bottles, on the ground that it makes them advocates of an organized service of supply?

Only 10,000,000 radios in the United States, the Department of Commerce says. Huh! There's that many in our block.

BRIGANDAGE IN CHINA

From the London Times.

In China brigandage is once more a profession which attacks an annual multitude of recruits. Demobilized or unpaid soldiers, peasants whose holdings have been devastated by the contending armies, are unfortunately to be found in almost every province and can be hired by any bold leader who has a little capital for the initial expenses of the venture. Their exploits drive the farmer, the shopkeeper, and the merchant to desperation and are the source of endless trouble and expense to the provincial governments. But when, to use the current phrase, "the best people do it," the efforts of well-intentioned authority to eradicate the growing weeds of banditry are unlikely to succeed. Lately indeed there have been cases in which generals possessing the confidence of the central government have themselves behaved like brigand chiefs.

Less than a month ago Tang Sheng-Chih, one of the best known of the tuchuns who marched to the Yangtze from southern China with the armies of the Kuomintang, encouraged his troops to mutiny and loot the city of Rukow. He himself seized the general manager of the Peking-Hankow Railway and held him to ransom in the approved manner till the captive's friends had paid £10,000. He has been permitted nevertheless to withdraw to Japan, sped on his way by the Nanking government, which has even provided him and his staff with their traveling expenses.

Such gentle dealing with official brigandage is likely to encourage other generals to imitate Tang. Already Gen. Lu Hsin-Pan has kidnapped, not an heiress, a merchant, or a railway director, but the chief members of the provincial government of Fukien. Recently "bandits" appeared in Foochow and invaded an official dinner party at which six members of the government were honored guests. The brigands bound them with ropes and led them away. For a time it was believed that Communists has inspired the outrage and that Admiral Yang, commander in chief of the Chinese navy and chairman of the Fukien government, was among their prisoners. But presently Admiral Yang, whose nautical training may have assisted him to loosen the knots in which his bonds were tied, if indeed he was made prisoner, appeared with the news that the bandit leader was not other than Gen. Lu, commander of the second Fukien division, and that his colleagues were still prisoners. The central government was indignant; it sent a cruiser to Foochow; it expostulated with the general. But whether it can or will arrest and punish him is doubtful, especially since Gen. Lu defends his action by the plea that the captured commissioners were conspiring against Nanking.

It is just this uncertainty that handicaps the Chinese in the negotiations now proceeding with foreign powers on the subject of the abolition of extraterritoriality. Before they make concessions foreign governments want to be assured that their subjects residing in China will obtain reasonable protection from the authorities of the country and that military or civilian brigands who molest them will repent it.

As long as generals can kidnap important officials and plunder the cities which they are supposed to defend without any risk of being shot, so long will these governments decline to believe in the power of Nanking to protect their own nationals, however much they may credit Gen. Chang Kai-Shek, Mr. C. T. Wang, and their colleagues with good intentions. The execution of a brigand general or two might strengthen their faith in the new Chinese regime.

SPIRITUAL RADIO.

Who knows but what the angels now and then
With glorious music flood the midnight air,
As once they did to catch the shepherds where
They sat and dreamed and talked of things and men,
Sheep, and no doubt their ills and habits when
By strange marvel delicate and rare
For that one instant turned to heaven they were
And heard what man has never heard again?

By some strange method could we only find
The true vibrations suited to our ears,
As is this thing called radio designed,
We, too, might catch the music of the spheres,
And in that holy moment of surprise
Pick up God's program from the midnight skies.

You Can't Fatten Prize Cattle Where Sheep Crop the Grass.

By ROBERT QUILLEN

PUBLIC and private schools need an intelligence test to weed out those who will get no profit from further instruction.

Every Tom, Dick and Harry is going to college—memorizing lessons, cramming for tests, and emerging triumphant with diplomas that have lost their significance.

Not one in five is fired with any passion for learning, and not one in five would finish his course if required to work and sacrifice to pay his own way.

Most of them go to college because it is the orthodox thing to do; because a college degree is a social advantage; because their parents require them to go, or because college life is more pleasant than the alternative they are offered.

They have no right in college.

The theory is that every youth in a free land has a right to an education, and it would seem unjust to deprive one child of this right because he is less brilliant than another.

His greater need should make his right more secure.

But the dog in the manger has no right to keep the ox from the hay, and those who can not or will not profit by instruction have no right to handicap those who can.

All educators agree that able and eager students are held back by stupid and indifferent pupils who consume the time and exhaust the energies of instructors.

And because the instructors themselves are helpless cogs in a machine—whipped by their need for bread and butter—afraid to offend—they smooth the way for the witless, promote the stupid to be rid of them, and at last award diplomas that indicate no more than a riddance of rubbish.

It is a foolish and unjust system.

There is no reason or justice or common sense in requiring a youth to remain in school a specified number of years, memorizing daily lessons he does not understand or wish to understand, when it is obvious that he will forget what he has learned within a year and profit by it in no way at all.

There should be an annual test in every school and college to weed out those who have gone as far as they can and those who are worthy of no further attention.

The stupid and the indifferent should not be coached and coddled and awarded unearned honors at the expense of those who are eager to learn.

Nobody wastes time and energy or plays the hypocrite to give weaklings a high rating in football.

THE GARBLE SISTERS.

(The girls who read as they run discuss the naval limitations parley.)

"There's a lot in the papers about this disarmament thing, isn't there?"

"Yeah. Pretty soft for a lotta diplomats spending the winter at Palm Beach discussin' navies, eh?"

"It's all politics. One crowd wants the navies repealed on the ground they're a failure after ten years. The other faction wants a longer trial."

"I ain't been reading much about it. All I know is that Mr. Wickersham got all the big nations to send delegates to investigate and report on the entire situation."

"Who's Wickersham, anyhow?"

"He was an admiral under McKinley, I think. He fought in the Philippines and has a parrot named the Old Soak. Wickersham has always wanted a small navy, and I think he's right. There's much more drunkenness today than there was when we had half as many warships."

"What can the conference do about it?"

"The idea is to get it before Congress and let the people vote on it at the polls. Did you hear King George on the radio?"

"No, but I saw his son, Prince Humbert, on the way to the church with that Greek princess in the news weekly. Did the prince talk over the radio, too?"

"No. Just the King and Mussolini and Col. Ruppert and Grover Whalen and a lot of fellers like that. I didn't stay to listen."

"I read a headline about Tardieu causing trouble. What was it?"

"He and Col. Shires demanded $85,000 a year for three years and Stimson threatened a suit by the stockholders or somebody."

"What for?"

"He claimed one of the delegates had drawn a salary of $150,000 a year."

"Which one was that?"

THE EMPLOYED WOMAN.

The time for making distinction between misses and matrons having employment in fields of activity open to women has long since passed, says the Detroit Free Press. Whether for better or for worse, the married woman in business, in the educational field or in industry is a fact that can not be eliminated and must be accepted. She is a part of the new social and economic order; and it is as foolish and futile to fight against her presence in America as it would be to attempt to deprive members of the sex of the ballot.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR.

Frequent Reader Finds Monroe Doctrine Out of Date and The Post an Old Fogy.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I am a frequent reader of the editorials in The Post and find many of them very interesting. I admire them because they say definitely how the paper stands on the issue in question, and not because I agree with them; in fact, I disagree with the majority of them.

I noticed particularly your editorial entitled "Teaching Us to Think." The whole article was written on the assumption that America's cooperating with the other powers would mean taking dictation from European rulers. The fact that the League of Nations, one of the attempts of the world to make war impossible, is the invention of an American, and that many Americans are on its personnel even without our being a member, is wholly overlooked. America take dictation from Europe—poor helpless America! The idea is as ridiculous as it is impossible.

A suggestion has been made that the Monroe Doctrine be honorably retired as out of date. The Post will undoubtedly fight it to the last tooth. Traditions violated; but no traditions were violated when the United States annexed the Philippine Islands in 1898 and proceeded to conquer them in a three-year war; no, traditions at that time were called sentimentalism and other such names. The Monroe Doctrine has outlived its usefulness; no European power now endangers the republics south of us or could endanger it without actual occupation, as the United States now occupies Nicaragua.

I am afraid the stand The Post is taking is as out of date today as the stand Rhode Island took in refusing to ratify the Constitution, because it was not entirely pleased with the result of the convention.

ALFRED H. STANTON.

Great Legal Discovery—"Felonette" Is to Felony as a Caterpillar Is to a Butterfly.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The science of jurisprudence has recently been enriched by the discovery of a jural concept of a very high order of luminosity. If it has for centuries escaped the notice of legal observers, that is doubtless because they possessed no mental refracting lens of the diameter available to the Wickersham committee. The felonette is a little felony. It is in its larval, or caterpillar, stage, neither a misdemeanor triable without a jury, nor a felony involving infamous punishment.

No judge passing sentence for a delict adjudicated by a commissioner could, by any hitherto known principle of jurisprudence, say to the prisoner: "When you committed this crime, it was a misdemeanor; when the commissioner found you guilty, it was still a misdemeanor; but when a jury found the commissioner was right, then as a matter of law he was wrong, and the act was not at the time of its commission a misdemeanor within his jurisdiction, but was a felony within mine, and I will have to sentence you accordingly."

But the Wickersham discovery of the felonette does the trick. It is no more felony while before the commissioner than a caterpillar is a butterfly. As long as it is a caterpillar it is that and nothing else. The felonette has a quality like that of the caterpillar—it can evolve into a being of a higher order; caterpillar before the commissioner, butterfly before the court of record.

Of course "felonette" is the vernacular; the scientific name should be delictus Wickershamiensis, with accent on "sham." VERULAM.

Starlings Spend Their Days in Fairfax and Their Nights in Washington—How Did They Learn That Trick?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I have noticed a great deal in your paper in reference to the starlings.

I do not see why it is not possible for these birds to be poisoned. They spend their days in Fairfax and other nearby places where they are perfect scavengers, and spend their nights in Washington. It would certainly be a Godsend to this whole vicinity to get rid of these miserable birds.

At the present time when there is so much snow upon the ground they are very hungry and they could be easily poisoned with food. Last summer they destroyed a great many gardens in this section.

I certainly hope that these birds can be exterminated, but it looks as though they are increasing by the millions. J. W. RUST.

Judge Clarry Held Thirteen Spades, All Right, But Not in the Court House.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The enclosed clipping was sent from Washington to a friend of mine in this city, and I understand it appeared in your paper.

It is quite true I held thirteen spades in a game of contract bridge, but one statement I wish to correct; the game was not played in the courthouse. It was played in my home here, on New Year's night. We drew for partners, cards were shuffled, then cut and dealt in the regular way. We do not play bridge in our courthouse, and I shall be obliged if you will make the necessary correction in your paper.

Flying Should Be Confined to Army and Navy, Says Pisgah Sage.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Your editorial, "Another Air Horror," asks the question, "Why have these tragedies occurred?" The answer is very simple. Fools rush in where angels alone should fly. A person going up in an airship knows he endangers his life. He takes the unfavorable chance and should expect to lose.

Let the Army and Navy do the air stunts. It's their job. They deal in death. GEORGE E. MEDLEY.

SPANISH ARMY, NAVY TO FIX PRIMO'S FATE

Dictator Calls on Both to Decide if He Is to Keep Post of Power.

ACT COMES IMPULSIVELY

Madrid, Jan. 26 (A.P.).—Gen. Primo de Rivera, premier and dictator of Spain, growing impatient at reports at home and abroad of the weakness of his government and of impending trouble, today called upon the army and navy which had placed him in power to say flatly whether he should continue his efforts to govern the land.

The premier issued a formal note to the heads of the army, navy and civil guards at 4:00 a. m. today, seemingly impulsively, for he had given no previous indication of any such intention. With a dramatic gesture he said he would resign within five minutes should the reply be that he is no longer wanted.

The dictator said that the best answer to reports of army disaffection was for the army itself to state its opinion. In an interview later, he augmented his formal statement by saying, "As I have often said, I want to leave office when the time is propitious and a proper man of good faith is available to succeed me. Unfortunately for me, I have not yet found that man, but I will never be willing to be forced out and in an improper manner by any one and against my will."

The premier for some time had been getting impatient at persistent reports of the weakness of his government. In the early morning hours today he received several reporters who again questioned him on several such reports. He denied them all, including one of a military uprising at Cadiz or elsewhere, and another that cabinet members had resigned.

A group of the highest army officials stationed in Madrid met tonight to discuss the matter, but made no announcement. The full responses may not be known for several days.

By CARTER FIELD

STEAM from the boiling prohibition pot in Washington is heating up the wets and drys from Massachusetts, on the Atlantic, to California, on the Pacific, with threats of a battle in Michigan and a few other central States.

The Wets are enormously pleased over the situation in which former President Calvin Coolidge finds himself, not that they have anything against Mr. Coolidge, but because the fact that Coolidge lives in Northhampton forces more spotlight on the special election in the second Bay State district. There are five candidates in the field in the primary on Tuesday, two Republicans and three Democrats. Up until the other day, while all three Democrats were wet, the Republican candidate generally thought to have the better chance was regarded as a Dry. This was Fred D. Briggs, of Springfield, organization candidate for the place made vacant by the death of W. K. Kaynor in an airplane accident.

Frank T. Hinckley, however, came out as a candidate for the Republican primary against Briggs on a wringing wet platform, whereupon Briggs hastened to get out a statement that he would be bound by the very large wet majority in his district in the referendum taken on the day of the Hoover-Smith election. So Mr. Coolidge, if he votes in the Republican primary Tuesday, must vote for a Wet, and if he votes in the election he must vote for a Wet, all of which, the Wets believe, will attract plenty of camera and news reel men, and annoy the Drys frightfully.

* * * *

MEANWHILE the Wets are just as pleased over the publicity given to the attack by the Drys on the alleged liquor smuggling by Herbert L. Pratt, and the failure of the customs authorities to collect penalties after the liquor had been seized. Everything that tends to call attention to corruption and violations of the liquor laws, the Wets shout, is grist for their mill. It is not a question, they insist, of whether prohibition would be a good thing if we could have it. That has become an academic issue. The question is whether legal prohibition is worth its cost in corruption, enforcement charges, and disrespect of law.

Meanwhile, aside from this special election in Massachusetts, which will decide nothing as it now stands because all the candidates are Wet, there is going to be a Statewide vote in the Bay State in November on the repeal of the Baby Volstead law.

* * * *

THIS represents a deliberate change in policy on the part of the organized wets of the country. It means, their leaders admit, that they have gotten tired of fighting to gain one senator here, or one member of the House there, and are now trying to add to the number of States which, by referendum of their voters, have decided against giving the Federal Government any local aid in enforcing prohibition.

Five States are now in this class—New York, Wisconsin, Montana, Nevada and Maryland—the last named never has had a State enforcement act. The wets are staking everything this year on adding Massachusetts to this list. They may be forced into fights in several other States, but they feel confident of the Bay State, following the overwhelming wet majority in the referendum of 1928, and they feel that to force the fighting in any other State would be tempting fate.

* * * *

IN Rhode Island there would be another wet and dry referendum if it were not so likely that the State Senate will decline to authorize such a vote. The lower house of the Rhode Island Legislature is understood to be wet, but the Senate is extremely dry. But interest is boiling up just the same.

Out in California and in Michigan some of the local enthusiasts are trying to force a battle to repeal the State enforcement acts, with the national wet leaders trying to discourage them, according to all indications. Meanwhile the drys are wondering whether it would be a good idea for them to meet the wets on this newly selected front and make a drive to "redeem" some of this alleged wet territory. Such a fight seems certain in the New York Legislature, for example, and the drys are also measuring the situation in Montana, to see if they think it worth while to try to reverse the vote by which the State law was wiped off the books. It would gain them very little except prestige, as both senators, Walsh and Wheeler, and both members of the House, are dry already.

So the wet and dry fight is apt to overshadow many questions of more interest to President Hoover, and of more interest to both political parties, in the campaign this fall.

Five Flying Surgeons Arrive in Guatemala

Guatemala City, Guatemala, Jan. 26 (A.P.).—Five American surgeons, members of an aeromedical clinic, traveling through eleven South and Central American countries, arrived here in two Sikorsky amphibian planes at 3:10 p. m., Eastern standard time, for an extensive clinical service tonight.

The flying physicians came here today by way of San Lorenzo, Honduras, from Tegucigalpa, where they were entertained by the Honduran government last night.

MANILA AMERICANS GIVEN REASSURANCE

Reprisals for Anti-Filipino Riots in California Are Guarded Against.

PROTESTS ARE PLANNED

Manila, Jan. 26 (A.P.).—In the face of threats by Manila gangsters to undertake reprisals upon Americans, especially soldiers and sailors, for recent anti-Filipino riots in California, Police Chief C. E. Fitts today assured Americans here they were in no danger.

Precautions are being taken to guard cabarets and strategic points in the city where isolated attacks on individuals might be possible, but the official said he was confident there would be no retaliatory outbreaks. Labor leaders joined the chief in an assurance there would be no violence.

The Philippines Herald, leading nationalistic daily, printed a story today in which it said Manila gang members, deeply resenting the attacks on Filipino laborers in California, were already mobilizing their forces.

The Watsonville, Calif., disturbance has caused widespread discussion in Manila, but thus far no known conflicts between Americans and Filipinos have resulted from it.

Several student and civic organizations are planning protest meetings and the chamber of commerce of the Philippines, a Filipino organization, adopted a resolution of protest this morning.

IN THE PLAYHOUSE

By JOHN J. DALY

TONIGHT the town opens up wide with two great productions—Mr. Otis Skinner, at the National, in "Papa Juan," and, over at Poli's, "Robin Hood."

• • • •

Now, "Robin Hood," as it so happens, is an old-timer in Washington. It was played here shortly after Reginald de Koven composed the score in his studio at Thomas circle. That was away back in the early nineties. After that "Robin Hood" came here almost every year, as one of the great theatrical attractions. Up to the World War "Robin Hood" was an annual visitor. Since then its visits have been spasmodic. This time it comes with a company drummed up in New York as the finest of the modern day productions. Some great things are anticipated. Tonight will tell the story. We shall hear what we shall hear.

• • • •

In "Papa Juan" Otis Skinner has a part to his liking. He plays the part of an old man. When Mr. Skinner chooses, there is no one in the American theater who can approach him from the artistic standpoint. Here is the one man who, behind the scenes, can assimilate the character of any old-timer he selects. On this occasion he has undertaken to portray a great-great-grandfather. Nothing more need be said. When Otis Skinner steps out tonight from the wings of the stage at the National there is bound to be seen some acting, and that, after all, is the business of an actor.

• • • •

Betty Lawford, remembered, perhaps, by picture fans as the daughter of the city editor who died so magnificently in "Gentlemen of the Press," and, later, as the feminine lead in "The Return of Sherlock Holmes," with Clive Brook, but whose major distinctions, nevertheless, hark back to the days of her activity on the boards, was a week-end visitor in the Capital, according to authentic advices reaching this department.

Miss Lawford is reported to be as ingenuously charming as one would surmise from the portrayals she has contributed to both the stage and the screen. Begging your pardon, Mr. Bell.

• • • •

Speaking of the Bells, the nonrelated Bells, when Nelson, my old office mate, and myself went to the farewell party of Wesley Eddy who should be there but Monta. Everybody in this man's town, including the laundry he used to "stand up" should remember Monta Bell and there was never a grander scout. Well, he landed in town on Saturday night—and what a party that turned out to be.

• • • •

Mr. George Tyler, the eminent producer, writes to this department that he is contemplating drastic deeds. He is going, as he states, to bring "Mrs. Fiske to Baltimore during the week of February 3 in a play that will either put me in jail for ever or keep me out. Now choose for yourself. Chances are, all Washington will start for the Monumental City when Mrs. Fiske opens her new play, "The Family Blues," whatever that means.

GAYETY

Bobby Nisen strives to fill the gap in this season's edition of "Parisian Flappers," left vacant by Flo DeVere and Stella Morrissey. Miss Nisen, former Cheverly, Md., girl, entertains in a manner deserving of high praise.

This production introduces in the comical line George Leon and Harry Morris, two funsters. Jean Bodine, a pretty brunette, comes next for praise in the female part of the cast. Irene Cassini, Mickey Ramsey and Frank Naidie all take active parts in this entertainment.

A chorus of sixteen pretty girls ranks ahead of any chorus to visit here this season. A specialty in which Sid Presson and Pete Segreto take part goes over in a big way.

Manager Jimmy Lake has on the program for this week auction night Wednesday, and amateur night for Friday. Mr. Lake also announces that Jerry McCauley, prize beauty, will entertain his fans next week.

Those who view "Parisian Flappers" this week may count on seeing one of the "Mutual's" best bets.

String Quartet to Give Concert in Washington

The Swastika Quartet, chamber music ensemble of the Curtis Institute of Music, of Philadelphia, will appear in concert here Wednesday evening of this week at 8:15, under the auspices of the Community Institute at Central High School Auditorium.

The quartet is composed of Gama Gilbert, Benjamin Sharlip, Sheppard Lehnhoff and Orlando Cole. They will be assisted by Joseph Levine, pianist. Tickets for the concert may be obtained at T. Arthur Smith's, the New Willard newsstand, A. A. A. headquarters, and Franklin Administration Building.

On the Rules of Traffic

By WILLIAM ULLMAN

The pedestrian no less than the motorist is restricted in his manner of using the street. There are regulations of speed and driving practices for the motorist, and similarly the law lays down rules for the pedestrian.

Under the District traffic code, pedestrians have the right of way at all uncontrolled intersection crosswalks, but are prohibited from crossing through moving traffic on streets where there are electric signal lights or where traffic is controlled by police officers. Between intersections, vehicles have the right of way.

Example: A driver is proceeding along Thirteenth street northwest above Clifton street. In the middle of the block a pedestrian suddenly darts from behind a parked car and is struck. The burden of proof in this case is upon the pedestrian.

THE FREEZING REGULATOR
The accessible Freezing Regulator, mounted on top with the rest of the mechanism, makes it possible to speed up the freezing of ice cubes and desserts, whenever desired.
Hermetically sealed within the steel casing are the motor, all the machinery and a permanent supply of oil.

The GENERAL ELECTRIC has always had a FREEZING REGULATOR and it is accessible

ORDINARILY the usual low temperature in the General Electric Refrigerator . . . always well below 50° . . . is sufficient for all food preservation purposes, as well as for the normal supply of ice cubes.

But there are times when a greater degree of cold is required for desserts or a still greater number of ice cubes.

The General Electric Freezing Regulator has been scientifically designed to meet such emergencies as well as the normal family needs. It is on top of the cabinet, with the rest of the mechanism, where it can be seen and adjusted with least trouble. It gives quicker cold when needed.

Come in TODAY and see the various models.

Please Consult Your Telephone Directory When Making a Call

To care for Washington's continued telephone growth and in order that the dial system, soon to be introduced in the downtown section, may be established in a manner wholly satisfactory to telephone users, certain rearrangements have been necessary, among them the discontinuance of the "Main" and a portion of the "Franklin" central offices and the opening of three new offices.

All former "Main" telephones and more than half the "Franklin" telephones are now designated "National", "District", or "Metropolitan".

Customers naturally become familiar with numbers and often call from memory; therefore we still get some calls for these former "Main" and "Franklin" numbers. This now results in confusion.

In the interest of good telephone service may we urge you not to rely on your memory, for the present, but to consult the latest telephone directory (issued last December), particularly when calling an old "Main" or "Franklin" number. The latest directory shows all the new central office designations.

From time to time we plan to keep our patrons fully advised, through advertisements and in other ways, of the progress of the dial program.

STEEL PRODUCTION GAINS DURING WEEK

Output at 70 Per Cent of Capacity Proves Best News of Week.

AUTO BUSINESS BETTER

New York, Jan. 26 (A.P.).—A further upturn in steel mill operations, bringing the general level for the industry to around 70 per cent of capacity, was the most notable business development reported last week. The increase, which was due largely to heavier railroad and automotive buying, nevertheless fell below the normal rate of gain for this period, and was accompanied by a further shading of prices which carried the composite pig iron price to the lowest level since October, 1928, and the composite finished steel price to the lowest since December, 1927.

Ford, General Motors and Chrysler, three of the largest motor manufacturers, reported a sharp increase in production schedules, and there were indications that some of the smaller producers, having recovered from the fear of poor first quarter business, were falling in line.

Freight car loadings and bank clearings, two of the popular barometers of business, both showed declines from the corresponding period a year ago; in fact, freight loadings in the week ended January 11, while nearly 27,000 cars larger than the week before, were the smallest of any similar week since 1922. The sharp decline in the volume of securities trading was held partly responsible for the drop in bank clearings.

Employment in New York Drops.

President Hoover reported in Washington on Tuesday that for the first time since the stock market crash last fall the trend of employment had definitely changed "in the right direction." However, New York State figures on factory employment showed that in the first half of January returns from more than one-half of the 1,700 reporting establishments showed a decrease in employment as compared with December, seven groups showing declines and four groups showing increases.

Crude oil production showed a rather sharp decrease, which was attributed to the voluntary restriction of production by mid continent producers who organized a joint protest against the recent cutting of crude prices by some of the large refiners in that territory. At least one more copper mine was closed down during the week, but the domestic demand for the red metal was reported to have shown some improvement although a "hand to mouth" policy is still being continued by the leading consumers.

As the week closed, operations of the U. S. Steel Corporation were reported to be slightly above 75 per cent

Wall Street Briefs

New York, Jan. 26 (A.P.).—Municipal bond issues scheduled for award this week total $35,425,793. The largest is the City of St. Louis, $9,000,000 public building and improvement loan.

A $10,000,000 issue of Central Gas & Electric Co. 5½ per cent three-year gold notes is to be offered tomorrow at 98.25. Other new offerings include $1,000,000 in first mortgage 5½s of the Iowa Public Service Co. The bonds are due in 1959, and will be priced at 98½.

The current issue of the Guaranty Survey, published by the Guaranty Trust, says that the revival in industrial activity in the last few weeks has been "at least as prompt and vigorous as was generally expected," and that, although this recovery has been mainly seasonal, it has been "sufficiently marked to warrant a more optimistic attitude than was possible a month ago."

The protective committee, representing the interests of holders of City of Sanford (Fla.) bonds, due and in default, has received for deposit obligations of more than $4,600,000 principal amount, or about two-thirds of the total outstanding in the public's hands.

Hudson Motor Car Co. reported 1929 profits of $11,594,854.82, or $7.36 a share on the 1,506,660 outstanding shares, as compared with $13,457,363.71, or $8.34 a share in 1928. The earnings left surplus of $3,415,085 over cash expansion and development of the new models.

NEW BOND FINANCES TOTAL $500,000,000

Absorption Process Causes Easing Price Trend to Continue.

FOREIGN LIST ADVANCES

New York, Jan. 26 (A.P.). — The process of digesting nearly $500,000,000 in new securities issued since January 1 is apparently incomplete, and until these enormous offerings are absorbed by the country's investors little change in the course of listed bonds is expected.

However, the easing price trend, which continued through last week, has been so moderate that students of the market are encouraged rather than discouraged. The undertone has been firm throughout the period of competition with new issues, and the list retains most of the advance it has made since the turn in sentiment late in October.

Thus the burden of new financing does not appear to be unduly heavy, observers point out; but they look for a decrease in volume of new flotations, since it seems improbable that investment bankers will risk overtaxing the market's strength.

One of the features of recent sessions has been the improvement in foreign bonds. With a large reparations issue coming relatively soon—probably in the spring—it is regarded as natural that this group should become stabilized in higher ground so as to prepare for the approaching international loan as well as for a considerable volume of other foreign obligations. The latter, to the amount of nearly $100,000,000, may come in the near future. A $25,000,000 loan for Austria is mentioned among the prospective offerings.

The listed convertibles moved out of their rut only slightly, despite the increased attention paid to stocks. Nevertheless the announcement of the large Baltimore & Ohio issue demonstrated that bonds of this type, combining features of both fixed income and equity securities, hold a firm place in the favor of both professional traders and the investing public. Admitted to dealings on the New York Curb Market, the bonds sold above 102, when issued, against the price of 95 at which they are to be offered to the road's stockholders.

New bond offerings of the week totaled $79,394,000, a sharp reduction from the record-breaking $305,000,000 flotation of the previous week. In the corresponding period of 1929 marketings amounted to $119,567,000.

Domestic bonds and notes maturities in February will aggregate $94,000,000 compared with $114,000,000 this month. In addition, $22,000,000 in foreign government obligations come due.

Central Gas and Electric Company
(Central Public Service System)
Three Year 5½% Gold Notes
Dated February 1, 1930 — Due February 1, 1933
Redeemable in whole or in part on the first day of any month on 30 days' notice at 101 and interest through August 1, 1930, thereafter at successive reductions of ¼% to 100¼ and interest for the six month period ending February 1, 1932 and thereafter prior to maturity at 100 and interest.
Reference is made to a circular descriptive of these Notes, which is summarized in part as follows, for a more complete statement respecting the Company and these Notes:
Company: Central Gas and Electric Company, a direct subsidiary of Central Public Service Corporation, furnishes, through subsidiaries, public utility service to 118,000 customers in over 200 communities located in Illinois, Wisconsin, Michigan, Indiana, Maryland, Florida and the Province of Quebec, Canada. Over 85% of the consolidated gross revenues and 87% of the net earnings of the Company's subsidiaries are derived from electric power and light and gas service.
Capitalization: The consolidated capitalization of the Company and its subsidiaries, as of November 30, 1929, after giving effect to the recent acquisition of Central Indiana Gas Company and to the present financing and the application of the proceeds thereof, is as follows:

	To be outstanding with public
Central Gas and Electric Company
Common Stock (no par value)	100,000 shares*
Second Preferred Stock $7.00 Dividend Series (no par value)	20,000 shares*
Preferred Stock $6.50 Dividend Series (no par value)	32,000 shares
Three Year 5½% Gold Notes due 1933 (this issue)	$10,000,000
First Lien Collateral Trust Gold Bonds due 1946	13,683,100
Subsidiary Companies
Funded Debt and Preferred Stocks (par value)	$7,984,182
Minority Common Stocks (par or stated value)	80,525

* All owned by Central Public Service Corporation.
The foregoing capitalization statement does not include $8,738,780 of obligations, to be subordinated as to principal and interest to this issue of Notes, and convertible at any time at the Company's option into Second Preferred Stock of the Company. These obligations will be owned by Central Public Service Corporation or its subsidiaries.
Earnings: After giving effect to the present financing and the application of the proceeds thereof, the consolidated net earnings before interest, depreciation, dividends, etc., of Central Gas and Electric Company and its subsidiaries, including Central Indiana Gas Company, irrespective of dates of acquisition, for the twelve months ended November 30, 1929, were over twice the annual interest and dividend requirements (excluding interest on the above mentioned subordinated obligations) on the entire funded debt of the Company and Subsidiary Companies' bonds and preferred stocks to be outstanding with the public.
Central Public Service Corporation: Central Gas and Electric Company is one of the important subsidiaries of Central Public Service Corporation, a rapidly growing public utility holding company. The Central Public Service Corporation's consolidated gross earnings are now at the annual rate of $24,600,000 and it has securities outstanding which have an aggregate value, estimated on the basis of current quotations, of approximately $100,000,000.

The 207th Dividend on Cities Service Common Stock shared by
More than 340,000 People
ON January 2, 1930, more than 340,000 investors, located in every state in the Union, received checks representing the 207th dividend paid by Cities Service Company on its Common stock.
Total dividends paid in cash and securities on Cities Service common stock now exceed $117,000,000.
Between December 15, 1928 and December 15, 1929 the number of Cities Service Common stockholders more than tripled, increasing from 100,018 to 341,497. Of the 241,479 new stockholders, 93,263 were added in two months, October 15 to December 15, 1929.
More than 600,000 people now own securities of Cities Service Company or its subsidiaries.
Earnings of Cities Service Company for the year ended November 30, 1929 were the largest in its history. These record net earnings totaling $41,650,000 represent an increase of more than $8,000,000 over the previous year
When you own Cities Service Common stock you participate in the growth of one of the largest business enterprises in America—you share in its success and its earnings. If you had invested $1,000 in Cities Service Common stock on January 1st, 1911, and held all stock dividends, you would have, today, holdings worth $34,575.
At its present price and dividend rate, your investment in Cities Service Common stock yields over 6½% yearly in stock and cash, payable monthly.
100 Investments in One
An investment in Cities Service Company protects you against the risk of putting all your eggs in one basket. Your dividends come from the earnings of Cities Service subsidiaries spread over 35 states and doing a day-and-night business in modern necessities . . . in electric light and power, manufactured and natural gas, and petroleum products.

DIAL FLASHES

By ROBERT D. HEINL

THE London broadcasts to this country via short wavelengths have been scheduled for the daytime, because short waves do not behave so well at night.

It is just the opposite with long waves such as our program stations use. The night reception is better than the daytime.

A commercial radio service, sending messages from city to city by wireless, instead of wires, was started last week by the Universal Wireless Communication Co. between New York and Chicago. Other stations of the company are held up by a court order.

AS predicted in this column, the Federal Radio Commission is very carefully walking around old man Henderson, of Station KWKH, at Shreveport. It is going to put him on a 30-day probationary period, but is not taking the chance of his getting on the front page of every newspaper by summoning him to Washington for a hearing.

Thus it is believed the buck will be passed to the new commissioners whom it is expected President Hoover will appoint before the probation ends.

Henderson, undaunted, continues to have a beautiful time bawling out the Radio Commission.

"That is a confounded, contemptible, pusillanimous bunch at Washington," we heard him say the other night, "and they had better quit monkeying with me.

"I've got this little piece of Louisiana air known as KWKH, and I'd like to see them steal from me what I already have.

"I'll fight 'em! I am not afraid of anything in this world but pneumonia!"

ANOTHER embarrassing situation to the Commissioners, while President Hoover is looking them over for reappointment, is that of Station WJSV, supposed to have powerful klan backing. Apparently the commissioners have determined that this is not a Virginia station.

Logically that throws it back into the District where "standing room only" is already at a premium. Like KWKH the station will be placed upon a probationary basis, and intimations are that a cut in power and change of frequency are coming.

Eddie Cantor, now with his show in Chicago, will be brought into the Pure Oil program by telephone at 8 o'clock tomorrow night, with WJZ and WBAL participating, but not WRC.

The Eveready program tomorrow night will be dedicated to Franz Schubert, who died at the age of 31. He wrote over 600 songs but was always poor.

In contrast to Schubert's meager compensation are the earnings of Nat Shilkret, reputed to be upward of $100,000 a year. He will direct the Schubert program. Shilkret also will conduct the Mobil Hour Orchestra Wednesdays, taking the place of Erno Rapee.

WE HOPE Mr. Mellon has been listening to Amos 'n' Andy wrestle with their income tax blank. Our opinion is that the worst is yet to come, based upon Andy's bookkeeping methods, such as putting down $7,000,000 as a day's taxicab receipts, instead of $7.

A boy of 7, who had disobeyed his mother and was anticipating punishment, when she called him from play turned to the other boys and said:

"There will now be a brief pause for station announcements."

Dare Interprets the Mode

What more lovely than a white satin coat with marten collar! (Courtesy of Bernard et Cie, Paris.)

Paris, Jan. 26.

VOILA, the black decolletage! Voici, the front decolletage! Aussi, the side decolletage! S'pos'n f'r instance, you have neither a delightful back view nor an especially intriguing front "shot," speaking movie-ish-ly.

Because some backs and fronts are entirely covered—in the evening gowns for spring, while the sides are quite bare from the shoulders down to the waist.

Leaving you to figure that out for yourselves, we will proceed to the next yelp. Don't cry, I'll sketch you one some day! There are still decolletages of the type only just indicated in front, but boldly cut-out-at the back right down to the waist, with mixed threads of the material holding the material close onto the bust and forming a sort of scintillating web.

* * * *

And decolletages that are "croise," pronounced "cwahzay," and meaning crossed in both the front and back, provide contrasting effects. Part of the croise is transparent, while the other is made of dull and opaque material.

* * * *

It was so really lovely—you have to study it to appreciate it, of course, but then we thought you would!

White satin, heavy, rich, and oddly cut. Fur trimming—and Bernard et Cie. No' to mention, oh, not to mention a Dare illustration All this for you today!

* * * *

A navy blue marocain skirt, an unlined navy blue marocain jacket buttoning hip-ish-ly over the hips, and a lovely fragilely printed chiffon blouse, which just shows at the neck in a fluffy sort of scarf effect—another printed chiffon blouse, which falls in a softly flaring jabot—another, but then, if you send a stamped, self-addressed envelope to the Dare Department of The Washington Post this week you will hear all about this lovely suit-dress and its mill-yun changes. On top of that, you can find out how to make it for yourself. Suit-dresses are the last word in spring fashions, you know, and how completely practical they are besides being modish!

* * * *

The Couturier.

Paul Poiret is called the "King of Couturiers"—a king with a very much disputed reign, as with all great people.

And Poiret is pronounced "Pwahray," with no accent on either syllable.

* * * *

Lack of symmetry is always amusing as long as it harmonizes with the general effect of whatever it accompanies. Flounces are not always put on straight on today's robes—some of them are deliberately placed askew and others out of line.

How to Keep Well

By DR. W. A. EVANS

To the limit of space, questions pertaining to hygiene and prevention of disease will be answered in this column. Personal replies will be made to inquiries, under proper limitations, when return stamped envelope is inclosed. Dr. Evans will not make diagnosis or prescribe for individual disease.

CONTROL OF BLOOD PRESSURE.

IN a discussion of high blood pressure, held at the 1929 meeting of the American Medical Association, it was the consensus of opinion that the treatment of high blood pressure was a matter of training and not of medication. It was agreed that there was no medicine that had any great effect on the progress of the disease, and, furthermore, that dieting for high blood pressure was of secondary importance. The progress of the disease could be held in check in nearly every case, but doing this was a matter for the patient, with a certain amount of advice from his physician.

Let George do it works all right when it comes to draining a gall bladder or removing an appendix, but when it comes to salvation in essential high blood pressure every man must be his own George.

Avoidance of anger and other emotional outbreaks tops the list of important dont's, especially if a man is anxious not to convert his high blood pressure into apoplexy. Next nearest the top is avoidance of worry and anxiety. Avoidance of heavy feeds or gorges is also important. So much for the negative side. Now for the positive.

A midday nap is advisable. The blood pressure falls during sleep. A short midday nap will hold it down somewhat during the afternoon. There should be eight hours of restful, quiet sleep at night. Recent research work has shown that night noises and uncomfortable beds interfere with the restfulness of sleep. One speaker advises one week-end a month to be spent at home and practically in bed. Frequent vacations are advised, particularly if the seeker after health is able to forget business cares when away. If home is not peaceful and happy a vacation to get away from it is even more necessary than one having for its purpose escape from business cares. Quiet exercise is good. Competitive exercise is bad. Leisurely walking amid diverting surroundings is excellent. So is golf, provided competition and striving is not a prominent factor. Persons who are overweight should reduce by dieting. Others should eat about as their appetites may direct, but in moderation always.

FRAGRANT, HEALTHFUL ONION.

Mrs. M. R. writes: Four years ago my mother was stricken with paralysis and was unable to eat anything, not even liquids. After two months in the hospital we brought her home. After a few days she asked for onions. I boiled some and fed her. It was the first meal she was able to retain in her stomach. So I began to serve her onions in any way she craved, and after a few weeks she was much better and could eat other things. Now she still eats them frequently, and says her bowels are better than ever before. (Mother is still an invalid, as her left arm and leg are useless.)

In my own home I buy onions by the peck and potatoes by pounds, and find that my children never need any laxatives and, therefore, they are strong and healthy.

HOME CURE IS DIFFICULT.

R. D. writes: I am 20 years of age and have tuberculosis. I would like to know if I can cure myself in my own home in New York City by drinking plenty of milk and eating eggs and wholesome foods, resting all the time and plenty of fresh air and sunshine.

REPLY.

Consumption can be cured in the home. People have been cured in the home. But the home is not the best place for a consumptive. To get well at home requires brains, obedience, patience, persistence and the proper temperament.

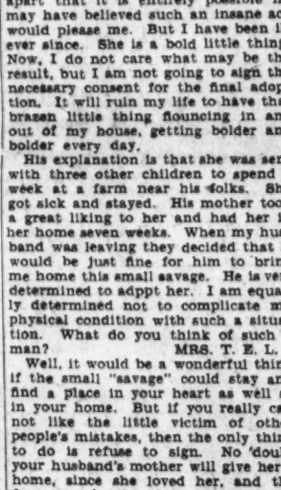
WORK ON BRIDGE

HOME BRIDGE CONTEST.

BEGINNING today and continuing for six days, three Bridge hands per day will be given with the bidding stated, and a series of questions asked concerning the play. This is a contest to test your playing ability; no question of bidding is involved. Each day write your answers to the questions of that day and keep them until next week, when the correct answers will be published. See how many you get right. Make a home contest of it by getting your family and friends to write their answers; match the answers from your home against those prepared in your friend's home, and compare results next week.

The questions ask what the play should be in an actual game. Do not permit your answers to be affected by knowledge which you would not have at the table concerning the location of any card.



South is the Declarer; final bid at Auction two No Trumps, at Contract three No Trumps.

CONTEST QUESTIONS.

(1) Which cards should be played to trick 1?

(2) Which cards should South and North play to trick 2?

(3) Should Declarer go game if adversaries play perfectly?

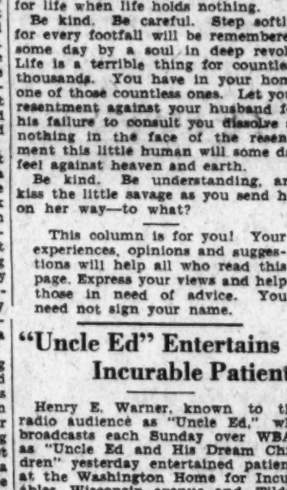
CONTEST QUESTIONS.

(4) West leads the Five of Clubs; which cards should North and South play on trick 1?

(5) Which cards should North and South play on trick 2?

(6) Should Declarer go game if adversaries play perfectly?



South is the Declarer; final bid at Auction one No Trump, at Contract six No Trumps.

To trick 1, West leads the Queen of Hearts, which South wins.

CONTEST QUESTION.

(7) Which card should South lead to trick 2?

Wives of Tomorrow

"An Unusual Proceeding."

DEAR MISS McDONALD: Your help will be greatly appreciated, for it is greatly needed. I am a very nervous woman of 45 and have a very active, healthy husband of 50. We hardly feel alike about anything and should never have married.

Recently he visited his folks back home and while there made considerable much-needed money on a deal he put through. When he returned he brought with him an 8-year-old girl whom he had legally taken for adoption, his mother being with him when the formalities were negotiated. Now, all this was done without one word to me. He said it was to "surprise" me. However, our viewpoints are so far apart that it is entirely possible he may have believed such an insane act would please me. But I have been ill ever since. She is a bold little thing. Now, I do not care what may be the result, but I am not going to sign the necessary consent for the final adoption. It will ruin my life to have that brazen little thing flouncing in and out of my house, getting bolder and bolder every day.

His explanation is that she was sent with three other children to spend a week at a farm near his folks. She got sick and stayed. His mother took a great liking to her and had her in her home seven weeks. When my husband was leaving they decided that it would be just fine for him to bring me home this small savage. He is very determined to adppt her. I am equally determined not to complicate my physical condition with such a situation. What do you think of such a man?

MRS. T. E. L.

Well, it would be a wonderful thing if the small "savage" could stay and find a place in your heart as well as in your home. But if you really can not like the little victim of other people's mistakes, then the only thing to do is refuse to sign. No doubt your husband's mother will give her a home, since she loved her, and the farm may be the place for the small, free spirit whose "flouncings" the years will reduce to solemn tread. Strange little spirits these wards of humanity, who all too soon will hear their story and hang their heads. No wonder that a few people like your husband and his mother suddenly feel their hearts contract at sight of these, the unloved of the world. Monuments to ignorance and passion, they walk the earth, the prey of prejudice and hate.

Try to be kind to the child, who some day as a woman will have so few kind memories to summon to her aid. Send her back, if you must, but forgive her for being a savage and forgive her for living at all. We who were worshiped from babyhood, petted in childhood, loved and guarded, and cared for tenderly, should find somewhere in our souls some bit of affection that we can spare for a waif unwanted and unloved, left to the mercies of a hate-ridden world to fight for life when life holds nothing.

Be kind. Be careful. Step softly, for every footfall will be remembered some day by a soul in deep revolt. Life is a terrible thing for countless thousands. You have in your home one of those countless ones. Let your resentment against your husband for his failure to consult you dissolve as nothing in the face of the resentment this little human will some day feel against heaven and earth.

Be kind. Be understanding, and kiss the little savage as you send her on her way—to what?

This column is for you! Your experiences, opinions and suggestions will help all who read this page. Express your views and help those in need of advice. You need not sign your name.

"Uncle Ed" Entertains Incurable Patients

Henry E. Warner, known to the radio audience as "Uncle Ed," who broadcasts each Sunday over WBAL as "Uncle Ed and His Dream Children" yesterday entertained patients at the Washington Home for Incurables, Wisconsin avenue and Tilden street.

The program, which lasted for more than an hour, was composed of songs and recitations which he has broadcast since his first program over the radio. Most of the 100 patients of the home were brought into the auditorium to listen to the entertainment.

Silversmiths Guild to Meet.

The Sterling Silversmiths Guild of America will meet tomorrow at 4 p. m. in the garden of the Hotel Mayflower for an important conference. About 40 leading members of the organization will be in attendance. The meeting has been arranged by Alexander Vincent, of New York City, secretary. There are a number of local members of this national association.

Uncle Sam's Home Hints

SIGNS OF GOOD NUTRITION AND OF MALNUTRITION.

(Children's Bureau, U. S. Department of Labor.)

A healthy, well-nourished child measures up to racial and family standards for his age in height and weight. He has good color, bright eyes—without blue circles or dark hollows under them, and smooth, glossy hair. His posture is good, his step elastic, his flesh firm and his muscles well developed. He is usually happy and good-natured, and he is full of life and animal spirits. His sleep is sound, his appetite and digestion are good. He is, in short, what nature meant to be before anything else—a happy, healthy young animal.

A poorly nourished child lacks several of these characteristics of a well-nourished child—or all of them—depending on the degree of malnourishment. He is usually thin, but he may be fat and flabby. His skin may have a pale, delicate, waxlike look or it may be sallow, muddy, or even pasty or earthy. Usually blue circles or dark hollows are under his eyes, and the mucous membrane inside his eyelids is pale and colorless. His hair may be rough, like that of a poorly cared-for farm animal, his tongue coated and he suffers from constipation. His skin seems loose, his flesh is flabby, and his muscles are undeveloped.

What Today Means to You

By MARY BLAKE

"AQUARIUS."

IF January 27 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 11 a. m. to 1 p. m., from 5 p. m. to 6:30 p. m., and from 11 p. m. to midnight. The danger periods are from 9 a. m. to 10 a. m. and from 3 p. m. to 4:30 p. m.

This date will be full of friendly dealings and important correspondence will be exchanged. A friend of days gone by will reappear or be heard from indirectly, and their reentry into your life is of good omen. Avoid speculations.

Children born on January 27 will be imaginative and given to exaggeration. They will be unconventional and will need a strong moral training. They will be gifted, but they may not have sufficient ambition to cultivate their talents properly.

You have sufficient confidence in yourself to display your talents to the world to advantage. Self-reliance has been called faith in life's possibilities. You are not afraid to step forward when your opportunities are revealed, and you are always on the lookout for self-betterment, whether it be through a friend, a book, or a place.

You are always trying to fill your mind with something new; your mental files are ever increasing. You are not, however, an intellectual snob, and you never try to show off before your inferiors.

You have both a fascinating personality and a worthy one; you are both clever and good. You are able to adapt and to adjust your life to your surroundings. Your happiness is not dependent upon staid and set conditions, nor will you allow it to depend upon any person or persons. You have many friends and many investments, so that the loss of one will not leave you entirely bereaved or stranded.

You have a great deal of influence over all those with whom you come in contact. Your judgment is respected and your advice is often sought. You are not demonstrative in your affections, but they are warm, deep, very lasting and very loyal. It is augured that you will have a happy married life.

Successful people born January 27:
1—Samuel Gompers, labor leader.
2—The ex-kaiser of Germany.
3—Bessie Beatty, editor.
4—Charles F. Chickering, manufacturer and inventor.
5—Richard Taylor, son of Zachary Taylor.

FUCHS BACKS HOCKEY PENALTIES FOR BASEBALL

MINUTE MEN OPPONENTS OF PRIMO

By WESTBROOK PEGLER.

By WESTBROOK PEGLER,
Special to The Washington Post.

NEW YORK, Jan. 26.—As a general thing I am not inclined to exaggerate the promise of new heavyweight prize fighters, having seen many such who seemed quite dashing and clever as they frisked about in new trunks, belaboring habitual victims with virgin gloves but subsided themselves, when matched against opponents just a shade above lower mediocrity not much later. But most heavyweights belong to familiar types, and when a new party happens along and beats up a Big Boy Peterson or a Quinton Romero in the manner of a tiger killing a horse, a fellow may say, "Yes, but Sharkey would have punched the heart of him," or "Loughran would have pronged him on the end of his left jab and waved him around like an oyster on a politician's fork."

Primo Carnera, this huge biological faux pas from Italy who charged into Big Boy Peterson in the Garden the other evening, tearing across the ring with the astounding speed of a vexed rhinoceros in a jungle film, is unlike any heavyweight prize fighter that I ever saw before, including Jess Willard, who had his height but not his verve nor his weight, by 30 pounds. He knocked Peterson down four times in half a round, and achieved these violent effects almost entirely by crashing into him, not by punching, so it still remains to be shown whether he can absorb a fairly hearty drive on his own chin or pitch a blow that a confident fighter could not catch or avoid.

Experienced Fighters Would Win.

It was my impression that of the heavyweights now in competition only a few with long experience and the craft derived from hard fights against various styles would have enough poise to evade bodily impacts with Carnera and clout him after he had overrun himself. Certainly any one fighting him for the first time will be undertaking new business, for Primo is of an odd size, a great lump of exaggerated muscles, like something drawn by a Russian cartoonist to represent the capitalistic system, and this feat of scoring falls by bumping into people is something that prize fighters have not been schooled against since the abandonment of the London prize-ring rules.

Of course, Peterson was selected for the special purpose of emphasizing Primo's singular gifts and style. The object of the evening was to unveil Carnera and bring him through the unveiling undiminished in the imagination of the customers, and Peterson, with his 209 pounds symmetrically distributed along his architecture, which follows familiar human specifications, was a pathetic figure facing a monstrous creature with wads of meat bulging beneath his shoulders and along his arms, like the quilted padding formerly worn in football.

Big Boy Knew Little Was Expected.

Moreover, the Big Boy had been given to understand that nobody expected much of him and consequently it was his privilege to adjourn at any time without prejudice. He was quite conscious when he did retire, and no worse hurt that a football player who has been sprawled four times on springy turf. The floor of the ring was comfortably cushioned with 3 inches of builders' fiber board overlaid with an inch or more of mattress wool, so that the landings were not as painful as they might have been, and the few aimless swats that grazed the victim's ears were less wicked, if anything, than the stout wallops delivered on a center's head with the heel of a loaded hand in a varsity game.

So, as a conquest, this victory of Primo's means nothing. No man has ever seen a monster so nimble and belligerent in a fist fight with a good prize fighter. He fought William Stribling twice in Europe, but they scored a foul apiece, so these bouts disclosed nothing beyond the interesting fact that when William put Primo down in London, Primo got up, which was contrary to the habits of fighters rising 250 pounds. Willard, in the last bout of his career, against Luis Angel Firpo, had an attack of ennui in round seven and calmly sat down without any special provocation, blinking sleepily at the customers,

Carnera Bout Holds Fistic Interest

Giant Italian Shifts Scene of Activities to Chicago.

Singer-Loayza and Hudkins-Flynn Scheduled.

NEW YORK, Jan. 26 (A.P.).—The center of fistic activity moves west this week as Primo Carnera, the Ambling Alp, makes his second American start at Chicago.

Carnera, who knocked out Big Boy Peterson in less time than it takes to tell it here last week, meets Alzear Rioux, Canadian heavyweight champion, in a ten-round bout at the Chicago Stadium Friday night. This bout may last no longer than did Carnera's joust with Peterson, and Promoter Jack Dempsey hopes to give the faithful a run for their money by pitting King Tut, Minneapolis lightweight, against Bruce Flowers, New Rochelle Negro, in the ten-round semifinal. This pair fought a savage battle in Chicago not long ago.

In New York the same night Al Singer, Bronx lightweight idol, takes on Stanislaus Loayza, rugged Chilean, in the feature ten-rounder. Harry Ebbets, Freeport (N. Y.) blonde, battles Doc Conrad, Newark middleweight, in the ten-round semifinal.

The Boston Garden's Friday night show will find Ace Hudkins, the Nebraska Wildcat, in one corner of the ring and Arthur Flynn, Lawrence (Mass.) light heavyweight, in the other. Bill Jones, Philadelphia Negro light heavyweight, meets Pete Latzo, former welterweight champion, at the Philadelphia Arena tomorrow night.

Other Bouts On National Card.

The other bouts on the national schedule include:

MONDAY—At Philadelphia, Tiger Jack Payne, New York Negro, vs. Yale Okun, New York, light-heavyweights, and Gabey Bagdad vs. Pat Haley, Philadelphia, welterweights, each ten rounds; at Kansas City, Young Jack Dillon, Louisville, vs. Chick Rains, Tulsa, and "Tiger Johnny" Cline, Los Angeles, vs. Billy Atkinson, Scammon, Kans., all middleweights, each ten rounds; at Baltimore, Gaston Charles, France, vs. Sidney Lampe, Baltimore, featherweights, ten rounds, and Charles Ernst, France, vs. Joe Raymond, Baltimore, lightweights, eight rounds; at Louisville, Jackie Dugan, Louisville, vs. Babe Peleco, New York, junior lightweights, and Bill Thomas, Louisville, vs. Mickey Berry, Louisville, middleweights, each ten rounds; at New York, St. Nicholas Arena, Izzy Grove, New York, vs. Gorilla Jones, Akron, Ohio, middleweights, and Tony Vacarelli, New York, vs. Steve Gotch, welterweights, each ten rounds.

TUESDAY—At New York, Lenox, S. C., Freddy Lattanzio, New York, vs. Victor Ferrand, Spain, flyweights, six rounds; at Los Angeles, Fidel Labarba, Los Angeles, vs. Johnny Torres, Los Angeles, featherweights, and Al Gordon, Philadelphia, vs. Rita Punay, Los Angeles, lightweights, each ten rounds.

WEDNESDAY — At Cincinnati, Bushy Graham, Utica, N. Y., vs. Freddie Miller, Cincinnati, lightweights, ten rounds.

THURSDAY—At Pasadena, Cecil Payne, Louisville, vs. Dud Eades, Pasadena, ten rounds, junior lightweights.

FRIDAY—At New York, Madison Square Garden, Dom Volante, England, vs. Louis Quadrini, Italy, lightweights, ten rounds; at San Francisco, Frankie Stetson, San Francisco, vs. Eddie Murdock, Tulsa, lightweights, ten rounds; at Hollywood, Frankie Campbell, San Francisco, vs. Denny Ross, Buffalo, N. Y., heavyweights, ten rounds; at Seattle, Wash., Dode Bercot, Monroe, Wash., vs. Cecil Geysel, Seattle, heavyweights, six rounds.

SATURDAY—At Cincinnati, Babe Ruth, Louisville, vs. Sammy Williams, Martins Ferry, Ohio, lightweights, ten rounds.

ALEXANDRIA SPORTS

Alexandria, Va., Jan. 26.—There will be a meeting tomorrow night to elect officers for the new Alexandria basket ball loop, that has just been organized in this city. The meeting will be held at Jack Tullock's home, 514 Cameron street, at 7:30 o'clock. The newly elected officers will act as board of supervisors for the league and will appoint the officials to handle the games.

Four teams are represented in the league, the St. Mary's Celtics, Knight Store Five, Del Ray and Whitestones. The Knight Store Five will open on Tuesday night against the Del Ray A. C. in the Armory Hall in the first game of a ten-game series.

Four awards will be offered this season, a cup to the winning team and medals to the most valuable player, high point scorer and the best defensive player.

The schedule follows:

January 28, Knight Store vs. Del Ray A. C.; 30, St. Mary's vs. Whitestones; February 4, Knight Store vs. St. Mary's; 6, Del Ray vs. Whitestones; 12, Whitestones vs. Knight Store; 18, St. Mary's Celtics vs. Del Ray; 26, Knight Store vs. Del Ray; March 5, St. Mary's vs. Whitestones; 11, Knights vs. St. Mary's; 16, Del Ray A. C. vs. Whitestones.

Alexandria High School basket ballers will only take the floor once this week, meeting Washington and Lee High School on Friday night at the Armory Hall. Both teams have won their first two games in the third district race and this game, therefore, will be watched with interest.

Coach Reynolds is leaving no stones unturned in preparing his charges for Friday's contest.

Episcopal High School Basketers caputred both games last week on their trip to the State capital. Friday night they handed St. Christopher School a 34-to-12 defeat, with Hancock scoring 20 points for the Episcopalians, while on Saturday they came back and defeated the McGuire School by the score of 39 to 19.

The Cherry and Black will play two games this week on their home court, meeting Central High School, of Washington, on Wednesday afternoon. The two contests played this week should prove to be brilliant scholastic contests.

The St. Mary's Celtics Basket Ball Team will have a full week when it takes the floor for three games here and one on a foreign court. Tuesday night the Celtics travel to Fredericksburg to play the Collegians, while on Thursday night they will play the Whitestones in the second contest in the local loop. On Saturday night they will tackle the Pontiac A. C., and next Sunday the Richmond Blues will furnish the attraction.

V. P. I. TRACK TEAM LISTS 7 MEETS

4 of 6 Dual Meets to Be Staged in Blacksburg Oval.

BLACKSBURG, Va., Jan. 26 (A.P.). Virginia Polytechnic Institute trackmen are to battle traditional foes on the cinders of Miles Stadium here in five of their seven meets scheduled for the coming spring.

The schedule, released today by C. P. Miles, director of athletics, lists six dual meets—four on the home track. The final event on the card is to be the annual State Big Four meet, in which the four Southern Conference schools of Virginia will compete in Miles Stadium.

The Gobbler runners are to invade Tarheel territory for their opening encounter with North Carolina State College at Raleigh. William and Mary, Virginia, North Carolina and Duke are booked to appear here before the Polytech team goes to V. M. I. on May 3 for the final dual contest.

William and Mary in First Meet at Poly.

William and Mary College runners are to open the home stand the first week in April in the first appearance of the Indians at V. P. I. since Harry Culbreth, versatile star and captain of the 1925 team, led the Gobblers to a well-earned triumph on old Miles Field.

The schedule is as follows:

March 29, North Carolina State at Raleigh, N. C.
April 5, William and Mary College at Blacksburg; 12, Virginia at Blacksburg; 19, North Carolina at Blacksburg; 26, Duke at Blacksburg.
May 3, V. M. I. at Lexington, Va.; 10, State meet (V. M. I., Washington and Lee, Virginia, V. P. I.) at Blacksburg.

U. S. Trotter Second In French Feature

Vincennes, France, Jan. 26 (A.P.). Sam Williams' second attempt to earn his brackets on French trotting tracks was a great improvement over his first effort, for the fast-stepping son of Peter Scott, out of Blitzie, finished a bang-up second in a field of thirteen starters in the International Handicap here today. The distance, 1¾ miles, again proved a bit too far for the American trotter, used to mile competition.

Joe Haldeman had G. H. Tipling's speedster in front 2 furlongs from home, but Bravade, an outsider, at 8 to 1 in the betting, came up to beat out the tiring leader.

Sam Williams paid even money for the place. Alesia was third. Amazone, the even-money favorite, was fourth.

Italian Man-Mountain Arrives at Chicago

Chicago, Jan. 26 (A.P.).—Primo Carnera, the Italian man-mountain, arrived in Chicago today to begin preparation for his 10-round bout with Elzear Rioux, of Canada, at the Chicago Stadium Friday night.

He went directly to a loop hotel where he was volubly delighted to learn that a special bed, about 9 feet long, awaited his monster frame. He later went to the gymnasium where he will work out, but did nothing but look the place over before asking his manager, Leon See, when eating would be done.

A crowd of his countrymen greeted him as he stepped from the train, and created somewhat of a sensation by following him wherever he went. Primo took time out at the hotel to dash off a couple of cartoons of himself—grotesque drawings of Carnera acting as a hockey goalie and as a skater.

Figures Prove Good Hitters Can Field

Star Defensive Group Selected by Young Has .303 Mark.

Ruth Covering More Than Most Fans Imagine.

By FRANK H. YOUNG.

THE impression in present-day baseball is that a manager has to sacrifice hitting if he wants high-class fielding, but the official American League averages recently released do not bear this out.

Selecting a team of players in the junior circuit based on fielding alone would give a combination such as would delight any big league pilot from an offensive angle, too. Suppose, for instance, Joe Judge was selected to play first; Charley Gehringer, of the Tigers, to cover second; Willie Kamm, of the White Sox, at third; and Ralph Kress, of the Browns, at short.

Each of these infielders topped all rivals on defense among regulars who played their respective positions during 1929. And, with the exception of Kamm, all hit better than .300, with Gehringer, Kress and Judge packing real punches. This is especially true in Gehringer's case, for Bucky Harris' star second-sacker led or tied for league leadership in practically every batting feature except home runs.

Picking two pitchers, both of whom fielded at 1.000, Fred Marberry, of the Nats, could do the right-handed work with George "Rube" Walberg, of the world's champion Athletics, performing when a southpaw was desired. This pair pulls down the average on attack, but not much in a hitting way is expected to moundsmen.

Ruel and Cochrane Rated High.

As to catchers, although Herold "Muddy" Ruel had the highest average, both Mickey Cochrane, of the Athletics, and Moe Berg, of the White Sox, outranked him because they fielded almost as well in many more games. Cochrane hit .331, although the White Sox receiver is another who pulls down the attacking average. His stick mark was .287.

In the outfield, the leading flychasers certainly would strengthen any team at bat. Al Simmons of the Mackmen, and Fred Schulte, of the Browns, tied for the leadership as fielders, with Heinie Manush, of the Browns, right behind them. Schulte is the "weak sister" of the trio, hitting but .307, but Simmons pounded the pill at a .365 clip, getting more than his share of homers and other extra-base hits, while Manush had a .355 mark at which to point.

Even including two weak-hitting pitchers and Kamm and Berg, who hit under the .300 mark, the batting average of this team of fielding leaders is .303, as shown by the following figures:

Player, Team and Position.	Bat. Ave.	Field. Ave.
Judge, Washington, 1b	.315	.996
Gehringer, Detroit, 2b	.339	.975
Kamm, Chicago, 3b	.268	.978

And if these figures are not convincing, one might consider among many others the case of George Herman Ruth. Although the New York Yankees "Sultan of Swat" is not included in the team named above, he was a mighty sweet fielder when in his prime. Before his abnormally small legs started rebelling at carrying such a massive man about, "Babe" could go get flies with the best of them.

Ruth Covers Ground Despite Bulk.

Even now, at 36, and appearing to be half-crippled at times, he covers considerable ground, is a sure catch, and has a great throwing arm. The late Miller Huggins, a truly great judge of baseball ability, had said that Ruth always does the right thing at the right time while fielding balls and this is borne out by some of the older members of the Nationals.

"They (meaning the fans) are always talking about Babe's home-run ability," remarked Joe Judge one day, "but I rate him as a great fielder, too. I've never seen him return a ball from the outfield to the wrong base and, believe me, he can hang on to any ball that he gets his hands on."

FORMER NAT MANAGER DYING

Joe Cantillon, Here in 1908-1909 Victim of Paralysis.

HICKMAN, Ky., Jan. 26 (A.P.).—In his home on the bluffs of Hickman, overlooking the mighty Mississippi, which he loved so well, Joe Cantillon, grand old man of baseball and one of the best loved figures in the sport world, lies dying tonight.

"Pongo Joe," as he has been known for many years from coast to coast, suffered a stroke of paralysis a few days ago but, because it was believed he would recover rapidly, as he did nearly three years ago when his first stroke forced him to give up managership of the Little Rock club in the Southern Association, his condition was kept from even his best friends and associates.

A turn for the worse took place today and Rev. Fr. Gettelinger, pastor of the Sacred Heart Catholic Church here, was called in to administer the last rites of the church. At the same time his brother, Mike Cantillon, with whom he was associated with many years in the ownership of the Minneapolis Club of the American Association, was notified in Los Angeles.

Has Been Active in Baseball For 46 Years.

Cantillon has been active in baseball for 46 years, and last year was supervisor of umpires for the American Association and was eagerly looking forward to another year in harness. He was 64 years old last August 19.

Cantillon, who managed the Washington Nationals in 1908 and 1909, has discovered and developed some of the greatest players the game has ever seen, including Amos Rusie, Rube Waddell, Walter Johnson and a host of others.

IN THE COLLEGE CORNER

By JACK ESPEY

Instances of athletes carrying on successfully in spite of great physical handicaps are many. There is one in Washington that has escaped more than passing notice for two or three years. This is the case of Delmar Cosgrove, of Gallaudet College.

If you've been following the doings of local college basket ball games, you know that Del Cosgrove is, and has been all season, leading the individual pointmakers. He boasts an average of better than 15 points per game, which obviously needs no support to be recognized as an exceptionally fine mark.

The thing about Cosgrove that merits laudatory mention is the fact that he is a leader in his field in spite of being mute and almost totally deaf. He can hear only the loudest noises. He has a capacity of 22 per cent in his left ear, but that doesn't help him in a basket ball game.

This means that Cosgrove uses his sight overtime. He must watch every move of his teammates in order to make his "cut" for the basket or take a pass. He must follow the ball closely, and without benefit of vocal warning or advice he must rely at all times on his own judgment as to when the situation calls for taking a shot.

Cosgrove Can't Shout To Teammate.

How many times does a player get loose, shout for a pass, and score an easy "snowbird?" Cosgrove can get loose but he can't attract the attention of a teammate holding the ball. So he loses that means of scoring, but yet he manages to average better than 15 points a game, of which no other local college player can boast.

The entire Gallaudet Team is likewise handicapped, but nevertheless, it has won eight of its ten games so far this season. Opposing teams can use speech and hearing if they choose.

And while on the subject of handicaps, consider what Coach Walter H. Young has done at American University. He took three freshmen and a couple of sophomores about a month ago and molded them into a really formidable team. He had a good team at the start of the season, but four of its personnel—all veterans—broke a school rule and were suspended from further competition.

Those now performing for American compose one of the youngest teams in college ranks. Capt. George "Reds" Olsen, the oldest, is only 19. Warren Colison is 18, while Orville Targee, Oscar Sells and John Woods are all 17. None, except Sells, is physically big.

They seem to be at their best against higher ranking opponents. Loyola, of Baltimore, and Catholic University felt the might of these mites.

C. U. and American May Clash on Grid.

American and Catholic may clash in football next fall for the first time. If they do they will make a welcome addition to the program of strictly local events which usually seems to be of starvation proportions to hungry Capital grid fans.

The mile relay teams of Georgetown and Colgate will renew a track feud started last year in the Crescent A. C. games in Brooklyn in the Sammy Reid Memorial Trophy Mile, named after the celebrated Crescent A. C. and Princeton athlete who was killed in the World War.

Colgate sprang a surprise last year by beating the Hilltoppers in a tense struggle which wasn't decided until the anchor men started on the final quarter. Eddie Roll, of Colgate, outran Eddie Hoctor, of Georgetown, in this race, shattering a succession of Georgetown triumphs in this indoor classic.

GALLAUDET'S ACE HOLDS HIS LEAD

Cosgrave Shows Way to College Scorers With 152 Points.

DEL COSGROVE, of Gallaudet, continues to set the pace for local college basket ball scorers as the season passes the half-way point. The eagle-eyed forward of the Blues today sports a point total of 152 for ten games, which gives him an average of a fraction better than 15 points per game. In two games last week he accumulated 28, the best individual scoring feat of the week.

Don Dutton, of Georgetown, remains second in the race with a total of 127 points, while Maurice McCarthy, Georgetown captain, holds third place with a 102 total. Johnny Ringle, Gallaudet, is fourth with 94, and Freddy Mesmer, Georgetown, is fifth with 77.

Cosgrove also leads in field goals, having collected 65. Dutton has amassed the largest free toss total with 49.

Sir Esme Howard Leaving Void in D. C. Soccer Ranks

Retiring British Ambassador Aid to Game Here.

By RICHARD S. TENNYSON.

IT IS seldom that the orders and changes of foreign diplomats affect sport in Washington but just that is happening in the local soccer world. Although it does not change playing conditions, etc., the retirement of Sir Esme Howard, British Ambassador from office and his departure for England has caused considerable regret among soccer followers.

Sir Esme and Lady Howard endeared themselves to Washington Soccer adherents first in the spring of 1926, when they honored a banquet held at the close of the first organized soccer season here by attending and presenting The Washington Post cup. The celebration was held in Concord Hall.

At that time there were but six unlimited teams in the District and Sir Esme Howard congratulated the pioneers on the success of the first season of the game in the District and expressed hope that the game would continue to grow and afford entertainment and recreation to increasing numbers.

Last year Sir Esme again attended the soccer celebration at the end of the season and, instead of one cup being before him to present, there were three. Washington Post cups and a

Braves' Head Will Seek Change

Tossing Cap Would Draw 2-Inning Banishment.

Stars Often Chased by Umps for Minor Infractions.

By G. W. (MONITOR) DALEY.

NEW YORK, Jan. 26 (N.Y.W.N.S.).—One of the first amendments to the rules of baseball, which AA session of the rules committee, composed of club owners of the National and American Leagues and a committee of baseball writers will be called on to consider has been suggested by Judge Emil Fuchs, president of the Boston Braves.

The judge is opposed to the helter-skelter tossing of players and managers out of ball games by the umpires. He believes in many cases the fans are robbed of seeing a star play through a full game because of some infraction of a rule or an attack on an umpire's dignity which is forgotten before an inning has passed.

Apparently he has been watching the rules of hockey with "minor," "major" and "match" penalties, for he proposes a change which will permit an umpire to discipline a player by dropping him for an inning or two without sending him to the showers for a full game.

Modest Penalty for Kicking Dust.

In other words, he thinks there should be a modest penalty for kicking dust on the umpire's shoes or tossing a bat in air over a called strike and a heavier one for bad language, and a still heavier one for roughness or fighting.

So he will propose the following to the joint rules committee:

"Amend rule 67 by inserting in the first line the word "flagrant" and by adding to the bottom of section, "If in the judgment of the umpire the removal from the game of such player, manager or coach is deemed too severe for the offense or violation committed, he is empowered to suspend such offender for any part or portion of that game as he deems proper punishment for such conduct. The substitute taking his place during such suspension shall be eligible to take the place of one other player in the same game."

No Attempt to Curtail Power of Umpires.

"You will notice that I am not attempting to curtail the powers of the umpire," says the judge. "I believe in absolute discipline on the field. But it is absurd to say that a man should receive the same punishment for tossing his cap in the air as for punching a fellow player or jamming his spikes into an umpire's feet.

"My change will give the umpire some leeway and should find favor with the fans, for it will ensure them seeing more of a perfect game."

Travel Federation To Meet Here Today

The International Travel Federation will hold its first annual conference for permanent organization at the United States Chamber of Commerce tomorrow. Charles P. Hatfield, of St. Louis, acting secretary, is already in the Capital making arrangements for the convention. The preliminary meeting was held in Norfolk, Va., last November.

Ernest N. Smith, executive vice president of the American Automobile Association, will be one of the principal speakers. Several senators and representatives are scheduled for brief talks. Two sessions will be held tomorrow, followed by a banquet.

Harvard Now Timing Athletes in Showers

Cambridge, Mass., Jan. 26.—Until such time as Harvard's locker and shower facilities get back to normal all Harvard athletes—and presumably their guest—will be restricted to three-minute hot showers, with an official timer equipped with a stop watch on hand to see justice done and the water hog foiled. This athletic innovation has been forced upon the Harvard authorities by the destruction through fire of the Old Soldiers Field Locker Building. Athletes may still spend all the time they want under the cold showers.

28 Exhibition Games Scheduled by Cards

St. Louis, Jan. 26 (A.P.).—The 1930 spring exhibition schedule of the St. Louis Cardinals, announced today, calls for 28 games, 15 of them with major league clubs.

The entire Red Bird squad will report for spring training at Bradenton, Fla., March 3, a week later than usual. The first exhibition game is scheduled for March 8 and the last one April 13. There will be no exhibition games during the trip home. The major league opponents will include the world champion Athletics, the Boston Braves, Detroit Tigers, Philadelphia Phillies, New York Yankees and the St. Louis Browns. The Cardinals also will play Rochester, Tampa and Indianapolis in exhibition games in the South.

Notre Dame Eleven To Get A. A. U. Trophy

South Bend, Ind., Jan. 26. (A.P.)—Presentation of the Albert Russell Erskine trophy to the 1929 Notre Dame Football Team, rated by the Amateur Athletic Union as national champion, will be made at the Pittsburgh-Notre Dame basket ball game in the University Gymnasium here February 8, it was announced today. Avery Brundage, of Chicago, president of the A. A. U., and a member of the committee which made the selection, will make the presentation.

VICTORIAN STILL AGUA CALIENTE HANDICAP CHOICE

Future Book Odds Drop In 4 Cases

Brown Wisdom, Gold Rush, Golden Prince, Dowagiac Cut.

Display Now Held 10-1; Several 500-1 Shots Are Listed.

Special to The Washington Post.

AGUA CALIENTE, Baja California, Mexico, Jan. 26.—The speculative fraternity is beginning to give Zeke Caress, maker of the big future book on the $140,000 Agua Caliente Handicap of March 23, a merry time of it. As a matter of fact, some of the big turf operators have lifted up wagers of such substantial proportions that they have made Caress rub some of the odds he first quoted.

Caress, who has charge of the betting ring at the Augua Caliente track, issued his first set of future book prices just a week ago, and now in his second issue sheet he is out with new odds against 5 of the 79 candidates for the world's richest stake.

Victorian, the favorite at the outset, remains at the same price, 6 to 1. The cuts have been on Brown Wisdom, from 10 to 8 to 1; Golden Prince, from 15 to 12 to 1; Dowagiac, 15 to 12 to 1, and Gold Rush, 50 to 40 to 1.

Display Odds Jump From 8 To 10 to 1.

One has been raised in price, this being the great stake winner, Display. He has been jumped up from 8 to 10 to 1. Money for Display has been a trifle slow in showing, but, as he is soon to be shipped here from Miami, where he is racing, it is expected that the 10 to 1 will not be "painted" long.

One of the biggest single wagers was a wire commission from New York on Dowagiac, some Eastern speculators betting $5,000 on the horse at 15 to 1, the ticket reading $75,000 to $5,000. Brown Wisdom, now running brilliantly here, has drawn heavy backing, one ticket on him reading $20,000 to $2,000, this being written before the latest deadline in his odds. Golden Prince, also here and winner of the Coffroth Handicap last season, has found substantial support. The stable connections the other day wagered $5,000 on him at 15 to 1, forcing Caress to slash the quotation to 12 to 1.

Canadians Force Drop in Odds Of Gold Rush.

The western Canadian sensation of last summer—Gold Rush—is carrying a heavy load of money sent from Canada. He opened at 50 to 1 and is now 40 to 1. Every report received from Kentucky declares that Victorian is training in tip top fashion, and should be heading for Agua Caliente any day now. Those who like what the turf terms a "juicy" price may still have their fling, for as yet Caress has not been forced to rub on any of the several 500-to-1 shots.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—LEUCITE, $5.40, $3.50, $2.90; OLD DUTCH, $3.70, $3.60; PATSY JANE, $5.70.

LEUCITE, taken back off the early pace and reserved until reaching the stretch, saved ground and, closing rapidly, overhauled the leaders and drew handily. OLD DUTCH, rated close up during the early stages, closed well when called upon, but could not menace the winner. PATSY JANE displayed good speed in forcing the early pace, but tired.

FIFTH RACE—One mile. Purse, $1,200; allowances. The Jack L. Dempsey Memorial. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to the post at 4:06½. Off at 4:09½. Winner, Black Dot Stable's b. h. (5), by Vulcain—Dawn Star. Trained by H. G. Woods. Value to winner, $850; second, $200; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 0:24 2-5, 0:47 2-5, 1:12 3-5, 1:39.

New Orleans Meet Marks Set in 1st Sunday Racing.

NEW ORLEANS, Jan. 26 (A.P.).—The first legitimate Sunday horse racing in the history of New Orleans was put on today at the Fair Grounds race track as a benefit for the local Elks club, and 20,000 persons went out and sent $265,000 through the mutuel betting machines.

It represented both the largest crowd and the heaviest betting on this winter's racing season. It brought approximately $60,000 to the Elks toward lifting the mortgage off of their building.

The racing was prece

SWEEPSTAKES IS REAL TEST OF DISTRICT BOWLING

Dark Horses Routed for 4th Year

Rosenberg Sees His Injured Ankle as Asset in Test.

J. Harrison Set Only Record; E. Espey Surprised.

By R. J. ATKINSON.

WASHINGTON'S "glorified pot game," the Howard Campbell Sweepstakes, stands alone as the great test of the thoroughbred duckpin bowler. When Maxie Rosenberg stepped down in front of the field of 57 pinmen of sundry classification Saturday night he placed his name alongside of three of the greatest small pin bowlers the game has ever boasted—Glenn Wolstenholme, Walter Megaw and Bradley Mandley. In four years of competition in this blue ribbon event not a long shot has scored.

Little consolation has been doled to the scores of ambitious stars who faced the odds and failed. Of the fourteen prizes awarded in the four major stakes, not an outsider, unless Dutch Newman, who finished third Saturday night, might be classed as such, has shared in the spoils. Of the numerous, varied alley tests provided the army of pinmen of the Capital and vicinity, none has proven the exacting test that the fifteen-game sweepstakes has since its inception in 1927.

Rosenberg Proved Thoroughbred.

Rolling under the handicap of a sprained ankle, and fearful that the injured member might force him to the sidelines at any moment, Rosenberg proved himself a real thoroughbred.

Happy in the realization that one of his fondest ambitions had been accomplished, yesterday Maxie dodged the handshakes and felicitations of his friends long enough to opine that his injured ankle probably aided him to victory more than it hindered him.

Afraid to press for fear that his weak support might collapse beneath the strain, the Temple star took every precaution to make every shot count for the most. With victory in sight, he could not bear down as he probably would have done under more favorable conditions.

In contrast, Bradley Mandley, who apparently had a second consecutive championship in his grasp as the last game got under way, apparently bore down with disastrous result. His 87 game in that final stand offers one of the most puzzling problems for the bowling experts. Mandley was largely at a loss himself in attempting to account for the sudden slump after he had dropped 146 pins in his fourth game.

Others Faltered in Big Test.

Mandley was not the only contender who faltered when the final test came. Georgie Friend found the plodding more difficult as the end neared. Others collapsed before the stretch drive began.

During the course of the 15-game battle, 90 sets of 600 or better were recorded. Joe Harrison's 665 string at Convention Hall in the second block goes in the books as a new record, replacing the 660 mark recorded by Johnny Welsh in the opening event in 1927. George Friend's 657 and Irvin Billheimer's 654 were next in line. Sam Benson's 179 game of Saturday night is six pins short of Freddie Moore's 185 record registered in 1927, but is the second highest recorded in the four sweepstakes.

Eddie Espey, the 17-year-old lad who stepped into District League competition rather sensationally just a few months ago, contributed one of the biggest surprises of the event just completed. His sets of 583, 609 and 600 earned him seventh place with a 1,792 total, an indication of what may be expected of him in campaigns to come. Although just out of the money group, he shared the honors, nevertheless.

Rialto Club Tenders Rosenberg Testimonial

The regular weekly meeting of the Rialto Club yesterday was transformed into a testimonial to Maxie Rosenberg, fellow member, who on Saturday won the Howard Campbell Sweepstakes from a select field of 57 bowlers despite a badly wrenched ankle and swollen wrist.

President Solly Rosenblatt dispensed with regular club business and Rosenberg was felicitated individually and collectively by members of the club with noisy cheers rocking the clubrooms. The club voted to purchase for Rosenberg a medal in recognition of his brilliant victory despite physical handicaps. Rosenberg described his triumph as the most relished victory of his bowling career.

SEVEN STRAIGHT FOR CELTICS

Alexandria, Va., Jan. 26.—The St. Mary's Celtics scored their seventh straight victory this afternoon when they defeated the De Luxe Team, 33 to 23, in a hard-fought game. The visitors, although a much smaller team than the locals, put up a good fight. Wright and Cohan were the stars for the winners, while Hook was the best for the losers. In a preliminary game, the Clover A. C. defeated the Spengler A. C. by a close score of 21 to 18.

D. C. SOCCER LOSES AN ENGLISH FRIEND

Recreation League trophy awarded by the Municipal Playground Department.

Whereas in 1926 there were but six teams present to hear words of encouragement from the British Ambassador, last year 25 teams were represented. Five were from the Washington Soccer League, eight from the Capital City circuit and 12 from the Recreation League.

Those who shared the burden of sponsoring the kicking game here when it was in its infancy, attached no small importance to the effect the interest shown by the representatives of the British government had on the game here.

The fact that Sir Esme was present brought out many older soccer followers who had not been interested in the first season and who later developed into valuable leaders of clubs and leagues. His presence also acted as an incentive to those who had struggled to organize the game here.

Fortunately, last year Sir Esme Howard was able to present one of The Post trophies to a club in which he was particularly interested. The British United Club won the elimination trophy and received it from the hands of its beloved ambassador.

The retiring British Ambassador is an ardent advocate of all forms of sport and encourages participation at every opportunity. Several years ago he spoke at a lacrosse game played between Maryland University and the Oxford-Cambridge Team in Central Stadium.

On this occasion he made a statement in a jocular mood that amused his audience more than a little. He spoke of the possibility at some future time of teams representing Mexico and the United States playing for the world's cricket championship and of English and French nines playing for the baseball title of the world.

HUMPHREYS SPLIT EVEN.

The Fort Humphreys basketers yesterday split even in a double-header, beating the House Senators, 54 to 20, but losing to the Boys' Club, 23 to 19. Perry Whitt and Rison ran wild against the Senators, but found the close guarding of the Boys' Club a somewhat different proposition.

PRIMO CARNERA OFF ON RURAL ROUTE

Godfrey Would Expose Italian.

To expose Primo or confirm as a genuine prodigy, I would select George Godfrey, who has succeeded Sam Langford as the victim of the Caucasian boycott and is compelled to spend much of his time in idleness, which, fortunately, suits his temperament between bouts with personal friends of his own complexion.

George had many rounds of schooling with Jack Dempsey as a sparring partner and while he is not inclined to cause trouble in the ring lest he use up his staff of opponents and go idle, altogether he has a developed knack of stifling trouble when it is brought to him. The weight handicap would be less pronounced and I can envision old George taking Primo's rushes obliquely then tying up Primo's arms and taking a turn as dealer with disturbing pokes at Carnera's center and his chin.

But, of course, it is idle to propose any fighter above the rank of those primeless and hopeless minute men of the ring, generally described as bums, as an opponent for Primo this side of July. He has been matched with Eleazer Rioux in Chicago and Jack Demave in Miami and I suppose that before the ball-yard season begins he will have bowled over these two as well as the full membership of Willie Stribling's rural calling list, a large group of docile tramps, who will stand still, fall hard, and lie where they fall.

Three A. A. U. Champions To Defend Their Honors In District Tournament

THREE of the championship teams of the 1929 District A. A. U. tournament are ready to defend their honors, one moving into faster company in quest of additional honors.

The Woltz Photographers, who won the unlimited title last year under the name of the United Typewriter Grays, are ready to defend that championship. The St. Peter's, 145-pound champions, who flashed to the front from nowhere last year, are being reorganized by Manager Kane.

The Boys' Club Optimists, who have won the 115-pound District championship the past two years, will move into 130-pound competition this year for the tournament which starts March 10. This team is composed of the same players who won the first title two years ago. Only Bernie Lieb, of Eastern, and Bob Lassise, of Teach, have graduated into the realm of the higher weights.

Danny Kessler, Dickey Fitzgerald, Buddy Klein, Bones Courtney, Matches Ferguson, Kenny Finnerman, Bits Colbert, Abie Klein and Tommy Nolan will represent the Boys' Club Optimists in 130-pound class. These players will meet Wednesday night at 7:30 o'clock at the Boys' Club.

Kane Calls His Players.

Manager Kane of the St. Peter's 145-pound quintet would like to communicate with members of the championship team tonight at Lincoln 6782. John Hickey and Whitey Pilfer, of Catholic University; Bob and Charley McVean, Joe Robey, Buddy McQuillan and John Slagel are again expected to play with St. Peter's.

At least three teams of the Prince Georges County League will battle for the unlimited championship, it was learned yesterday when the managers of the Dixie Pig, Company F, and Brentwood Hawk clubs applied for registration papers. These three teams have been waging a spirited battle in the league and it is probable that each will call additional strength into play for the tournament.

Friday Last Date To Register.

With the deadline for receiving individual registration applications set for Friday at midnight, managers of the unlimited and 145-pound quints are busy lining up their talent. A. A. U. officials have announced that no registration application will be received after midnight of Friday. Registrations for the other five classes may be obtained until midnight of February 28.

Brentwood Hawk Five Nears County Honors

Turning in their ninth straight victory yesterday in the Hyattsville Armory, the Brentwood Hawks practically clinched the championship of the Prince Georges County Basket Ball League by defeating the scrappy Dor-A Five, 19 to 13. The Hawks now lead the Dor-A and Company F teams, tied for second place, by three games, with but one uncertain spot remaining on the schedule.

Wanley and Wiler led the winning attack with seven points each. The Dor-A team rallied late in the second half after Wanley had retired on personal fouls, but was unable to overcome the winners' lead. Dobbs and J. Troy stood out in the Dor-A attack.

EAGLES BEAT RICHMOND QUINTET

Skinker Extended to Win Game From Blues, 47-35.

DISTRICT basket ball fans will pay to see the Skinker Bros. Eagles extended, something that no local team seems capable of doing. A capacity crowd saw the Richmond Blues give the Eagles a great battle in the Silver Spring Armory yesterday afternoon. The Eagles were pressed all the way to gain a 47 to 35 decision.

Taking a 21-to-17 lead for the first half, the Eagles came back after intermission with a rally that netted a comfortable lead. The last quarter found the passers from Virginia's capital charging willingly and but for some well-placed shots by Ralph Bennie and Joe Sweeney, the Eagle lead would have perished before the driving attack of the visitors.

Blues Make Bid Near End.

The injection of Warton and Powers into the Blue line-up in the closing minutes gave the invaders new life and for a brief period the Eagle lead was cut to small proportions.

The Eagle attack did not work as smooth against the Blues as it has against other rivals seen here this season. The Blues found the Eagle defense too formidable to penetrate, making most of their shots from difficult and distant points.

Again and Again

Spit is a horrid word, but it is worse on the end of your cigar

...the war against Spitting is a crusade of decency... join it. Smoke CERTIFIED CREMO!

He tried to "get away"... but they caught him in the act. And yet his filthy habit is no more disgusting than the bestial custom of the workman who rolls cigars with dirty fingers and spits on the ends!

Why punish the one, yet tolerate the vile practice of the other? Smoke Certified Cremo and protect yourself against this abomination! Every tobacco leaf entering the clean, sunny Certified Cremo factories is scientifically treated by methods developed by the United States Government during the war. And its purity is safeguarded along every step of the way by amazing inventions that foil, wrap and tip the cigars without the possibility of spit!

Try a Certified Cremo—see how wonderfully good it is! Made of the choicest, tenderest leaves that the crop affords, we claim Certified Cremo's quality is tastier than that of any other cigar. Don't let its 5c price stand in your way. Certified Cremo is the kind of cigar your physician has in mind when he recommends a mild smoke in place of heavy brands.

Crush-proof... immaculate... foil-wrapped ... Certified Cremo is the kind of cigar the late Vice-President Marshall undoubtedly had in mind when he said, "What this country needs is a good 5c cigar!"

ELLA CINDERS—Pursuing the Villain — By Bill Conselman and Charlie Plumb

Ella's motion picture troupe is on a ship cast helplessly about by rough weather.
THEY'RE LOOKING FOR O. WATTERS NEEK! THE CAPTAIN SUSPECTS HIM OF WRECKING THE SHIP'S COMPASS AND RADIO DURING THE STORM!
I WANT THAT FELLOW IN THE BRIG BEFORE HE STARTS A MUTINY!
BUT, CAPTAIN, YOU CAN'T LOCK HIM UP! HE PLAYS THE ROLE OF VILLAIN IN MY TALKING PICTURE!
AYE, AND WELL CAST HE IS TOO! AND WHEN I HAVE HIM IN IRONS, WE'LL BOTH KNOW WHERE TO FIND HIM WHEN WE WANT HIM!
PERHAPS YOU'RE RIGHT! I CAN'T PHOTOGRAPH HIM WHILE HE'S HIDING! THE ONLY WAY TO KEEP HIM BEFORE THE CAMERA IS TO PUT HIM BEHIND THE BARS!

GASOLINE ALLEY — Don't Wait For the Change

MR. MACROTH, I'M OFF FOR FLORIDA NEXT WEEK AND I WONDERED IF THERE WAS ANY NEWS OF CODA'S ESTATE OR IF I MIGHT BE NEEDED.
I THINK YOU WILL BE SAFE IN LEAVING, MR. WALLET. TWO OF THE GLOVANIAN DISSATISFIED HEIRS ARE CLAIMING IN LONDON THAT PROOF OF DEATH HAS NOT BEEN ESTABLISHED.
THEY, OF COURSE, ARE PLAYING FOR DELAY KNOWING IT CAN'T DO THEM ANY HARM AND MAY DO THEM SOME GOOD. THE HIGH COURT OF JUSTICE IS LISTENING TO THE CONTENTIONS OF VARIOUS INTERESTED GLOVANIANS AND IT ALL TAKES TIME.
IT CERTAINLY DOES. WELL I'M GETTING USED TO BEING A RICH MAN WITHOUT ANY MONEY TO SPEND.
WELL AS LONG AS YOU ARE NOT DEPENDING ON CODA'S MONEY TO GO SOUTH WITH I'D SAY GO AHEAD.
NO. THIS IS A BUSINESS TRIP PAID FOR BY THE COMPANY. I'M NOT GOING TO WAIT TILL I'M SO OLD THEY'LL HAVE TO PUSH ME DOWN THERE IN A WHEEL CHAIR.

ADVICE ON INVESTMENTS

By CHARLES W. STORM.

Commonwealth Southern.

T. B.—Please tell me what you can of Commonwealth Southern Corporation for a small investor. How does this company earn its money?

Answer—Commonwealth & Southern pays 60 cents a share annually in dividends. It is a holding company whose investments comprise public utility securities. In other words, it is an investment trust. This column, however, issues no advice on investment trust stocks, other than to point out that good management is essential when considering such stocks for investment. Some of these holding companies are directed by some of the ablest minds in the country, and their stocks are listed on the exchanges. You must, therefore, use your own judgment.

Seaboard and Western Maryland.

A. M. W.—1. Do you consider the Seaboard Air Line a good investment? 2. Whta is the reason for it selling so low? 3. In case the Interstate Commerce Commission merges it with some big system, like the Wabash, will the stock rise to the same market level as Wabash? 4. Do you consider the Western Maryland a good buy?

Answer—Both the Seaboard Air Line and the Western Maryland are not investment stocks, but come under the category of speculation. Neither pays dividends and earnings have not been sufficient to warrant any distribution to stockholders. That is the reason why Seaboard is selling so low. If the Seaboard Air Line should go in with the Wabash, it would give the stock some speculative coloring, but it would not mean that it would sell at the same price as Wabash. Far from it.

Commercial Solvents.

T. F.—I understand that the chemical companies are facing a rather good outlook. What can you tell me about Commercial Solvents?

Answer—This company is the only producer of butanol (normal butyl alcohol) in the United States. Other chief products are acetone and ethyl alcohol. Derivatives and by-products also are a source of revenue. The solvents supplied by this company are widely used in the making of lacquers, varnishes, films, celluloids, &c. Its business has shown rapid expansion and the company's patent situation is strong. Commercial Solvents does a large part of its business with automobile manufacturers. Gross profits have shown marked expansion in the past four years.

Net income increased nearly 50 per cent in 1928. Less than half of the net income of the last five years has been paid out in dividends. Net income for the third quarter of 1929 equaled $4.47 a share, as compared with $4.12 a share for the corresponding period of 1928, while net for the first nine months of 1929 equaled $12.40 a share, as contrasted with $9.64, the earnings being based on the amount of stock out before the 10-for-1 split. The new stock pays $1 a share annually in dividends.

While earnings for the next few months will be governed in a large measure by developments in the automobile industry, the growth of artificial silk production continues, providing a greater demand for the company's products. The stock may be regarded as a conservative investment for long-term holdings.

Swift & Co.

J. J. R.—Do you regard Swift & Co. stock cheap at current levels? What is the outlook for this company?

Answer—Swift is one of the two leading packers of the country. It handles dairy products, eggs and poultry, and is one of the largest distributors of butter. On January 9 stockholders ratified the proposal of directors to change the capital stock from 1,500,000 shares of $100 par to 6,000,000 shares of $25 par value. The stock is exchangeable on the basis of four new shares for one of old. Swift reported for the year ended November 2 last earnings equal to $8.71 a share, as compared with $9.87 a share for 1928. Sales last year passed the $1,000,000,000 mark, as compared with $970,000,000 for 1928.

The present stock has paid $8 a year since 1916, and it is expected that the new shares will carry a $2 annual dividend, which would be at the same rate as on the present issue. The outlook appears to be good, as Swift has increased output and has reduced manufacturing costs. The stock is placed in the category of conservative investment issues.

NEWS FROM MARYLAND AND VIRGINIA

WASHINGTON FETE PLANS COMPLETE

Route of Parade to Be Staged February 22 Is Given by Committee.

CHAIRMEN ARE NAMED

THE WASHINGTON POST BUREAU.
312 S. Washington St., Alexandria, Va.
Phone Alexandria 523.

The George Washington Birthday Association has chosen the route for the parade which will be held here February 22, has chosen officials for the parade and appointed a committee to extend invitations to distinguished visitors.

The parade will start at 2:30 o'clock and will be reviewed by President Hoover, Gov. John Garland Pollard, their respective staffs, and other distinguished visitors, from an inclosed stand at the corner of Washington and Queen streets. The parade will form at King and Fairfax streets, will proceed west on King street to Washington street, south on Washington to Prince, west on Prince to Payne, north on Payne to King, east on King to Washington, past the reviewing stand at Washington and Queen streets, thence to Wythe street, where it will disband. The course selected is approximately 2 miles long.

A committee composed of Mayor William Albert Smoot, Col. John H. Trimyer, Martin E. Greene, City Manager Wallace Lawrence, J. William May and John B. Gordon has been appointed to send out invitations to members of both houses of Congress, the Diplomatic Corps and other guests.

Lieut. Col. Louis M. Evans has been named chief of staff, with Charles W. King as assistant chief, and a committee composed of Charles W. King, Robert G. Carter, F. Clinton Knight, Martin E. Greene, J. William May and Harry D. Kirk, the last named being ex officio chairman, will select a chief marshal. It is understood the committee will invite Gen. Charles P. Summerall, chief of staff of the Army, to act in this capacity.

The assistant chief of staff has announced the appointment of Robert G. Carter, F. Clinton Knight and St. Clair D. Shelton as aids to the chief of staff, all these being members of Alexandria Post, No. 24, American Legion. Mr. Carter has been relieved of the chairmanship of the automobile committee, and George W. Boyd named in his place, Mr. Carter's resignation being tendered so as to allow him to perform other duties in connection with the parade.

Howard L. Arnold, commander of the local American Legion Post, has been named chairman of a committee to arrange with legion men, and also with the Spanish-American War veterans to have units in the parade. It is expected the Richmond Light Infantry Blues battalion will be on hand as escort to Gov. Pollard.

An invitation also will be extended to the George Washington Masonic National Memorial Association, which will meet here in annual session February 22, to join with the birthday association in placing a wreath on the tomb of Washington at Mount Vernon.

The Alexandria Chamber of Commerce now is receiving from the superintendent of public printing of the State of Virginia copies of all House and Senate bills, advance sheets, House and Senate journals, acts of the Assembly and other public documents. These will be examined by the chairman of the legislative committee and the secretary of the chamber of commerce, and the business firms in the city interested in seeing the bills will be notified by mail. The bills will be filed so that they will be easy of access and may be consulted at any time by those interested. They may not, however, be taken from the rooms of the chamber of commerce.

Funeral services for John D. Butts, who was killed Saturday afternoon when his automobile was in collision with an electric car of the Mount Vernon, Alexandria & Washington Railway, at North Braddock Station, will be conducted at Wheatley's mortuary chapel at 2 o'clock tomorrow afternoon. Burial will be in Ivy Hill Cemetery.

Dr. T. Marshall Jones, city coroner, will hold an inquest into the death of young Butts at police headquarters at 11 o'clock this morning. A number of witnesses have been called, including the motorman and conductor of the electric car, Fred Johnson and F. H. Beach, respectively.

According to reports made to the police, Mr. Butts was driving west on Washington avenue, and a bus had halted at the intersection of that avenue and the tracks of the railway. Mr. Butts either did not see the trolley car approaching, or thought he had time to cross the tracks ahead of it, as it was reported that he drove around the bus and was squarely across the tracks when struck by the trolley car. His automobile was carried about 150 feet before the car could be stopped. Mr. Butts sustained a fractured skull and was pronounced dead when taken to the Alexandria Hospital a few minutes after the accident.

He was the son of Frank Butts, of Duke street extended. Both father and son were employed by the Alexandria Iron Works, the son being the Washington representative of the company.

The monthly meeting of the Civic Bureau of the Chamber of Commerce will be held at 8 o'clock tonight in the offices of the chamber in the George Mason Hotel. A number of important committee reports will be made, among them being a report on the proposed improvement of Armory Hall; the report of the committee to investigate the State law on the gasoline tax; the committee on selecting a new slogan for the city, and the committee on architecture, through Maj. W. Dubois Brookings, chairman.

The Robert E. Lee Memorial Foundation will continue to keep the local committee headquarters at 717 King street, open this week, with members of the committee and assistants in charge. Mrs. C. A. S. Sinclair will be the hostess this morning and Mrs. M. C. C. Peyton in the afternoon.

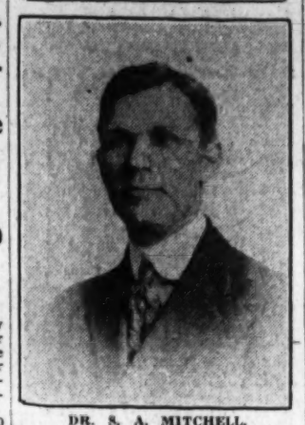
Court Asked to Force Permit for Billboard

Special to The Washington Post.

Lynchburg, Va., Jan. 16.—A mandamus to compel the city to issue a permit for erection of a billboard here, set for yesterday in the circuit court, was continued until next Thursday because of the absence of the judge from the city.

The city has acted under an ordinance in refusing the permit and the Virginia Outdoor Advertising Co., asking the writ, is expected to attack the validity of the ordinance. Should this be done successfully it would leave the city without a curb on location of billboards on private property in the city.

STUDIES STARS



DR. S. A. MITCHELL.

VIRGINIA PROFESSOR HONORED FOR WORK

Dr. S. A. Mitchell Computes Distances to 1,000 Stellar Bodies.

PIONEER IN HIS FIELD

Charlottesville, Va., Jan. 26 (A.P.).—Dr. Samuel Alfred Mitchell, professor of astronomy at the University of Virginia and director of the Leander McCormick Observatory, today announced he had completed measuring the distance to 1,000 stars.

In recognition of his contribution to science, leading astronomers of the East will gather at Yale University Friday, February 7, for a dinner honoring Dr. Mitchell.

The McCormick Observatory, on top of Mount Jefferson, leads the world in measuring steller distances by the parallax method. With 1,000 published parallaxes it is more than 100 ahead of the Alleghany Observatory at the University of Pittsburgh.

The Yerkes Observatory of the University of Chicago, the Mount Wilson Observatory of the University of California, the Sproul Observatory of Swarthmore College, and the Greenwich Observatory in England have measured distances to some 300 stars. And all the others will add about 300 more, making a total of a few more than 3,200 stellar measurements now completed.

Some Work Is Duplicated.

This, university officials say, does not mean that direct distances have been measured from the earth to 3,000 stars, for there is purposely much duplication. This was done in order that observers might maintain a constant check on each other. The actual number measured, Dr. Mitchell said, is about 2,000.

The trigonometric method used at the McCormick Observatory is the only direct way of measuring stellar distances, Dr. Mitchell pointed out. He explained it is done by carefully making photographs of the star from opposite ends of the orbit of the earth as it moves around the sun. This gives the astronomer a known base line from which he can compute the stellar distances.

At the University of Virginia half an hour is required to secure a suitably exposed plate. The parallax depends upon the measurement of about twenty plates. When the photographic work was started at the University of Virginia in 1913 the measurement of a single parallax required a total of approximately 50 hours but by using more efficient methods recently the time has been considerably shortened. When Prof. Mitchell came to the McCormick Observatory eighteen years ago, the distances of not more than 100 stars were reliably known.

Trigonometric System Limited.

Astronomers express distance not in miles but in light years; the distance of space through which a beam of light will travel in one year. Because the direct trigonometric method can not be used with stars more than 300 light years away, several indirect methods of measuring stellar distances have been worked out.

In speaking of the stellar universe, astronomers refer in terms of millions of light years. These conceptions of enormous distances rest upon the foundation work done by Prof. Mitchell and others who have measured the direct distances to stars by the trigonometric method.

Suspected Slayer Held for Virginia

Man, Apprehended in North Carolina, Accused of Shooting Officers.

Lincolnton, N. C., Jan. 26 (A.P.).—Garland Smith, 23, of Mecklenburg County, Va., wanted in connection with the slaying of two officers near Clarksville, Va., on December 29, was captured in Lincoln County today. He is being held for Virginia officers.

Smith had been transporting liquor, officers said, and was in the act of pouring it out to prevent its use as evidence when they arrested him after a chase.

Sheriff J. H. Reinhardt, of Lincoln County, said the man arrested admitted he was Garland Smith, and that he lived near Clarksville, Va., but denied any knowledge of the shooting of the two officers near near there.

Barnard Puryear, a deputy sheriff, and Mack Tuck, Clarksville policeman, were shot from ambush and wounded fatally near Clarksville on December 29, a short while after they accompanied other officers in raiding a still. Both died from their wounds in an Oxford, N. C., hospital.

JUDGE TO HEAR ROW OVER COUNTY ENGINE

Order Against Arlington Removing Apparatus to Be Argued.

FIREMEN ARE TO MEET

ARLINGTON COUNTY.
BUREAU OF THE POST.
Tel. Clar. 309. Clarendon, Va.

Judge Frederick W. Coleman, of Fredericksburg, Va., will hold a hearing in the Circuit Court of Arlington County tomorrow morning at 10 o'clock on the temporary injunction restraining the county board of supervisors from removing from Potomac the new American LaFrance fire engine placed there prior to the Town of Potomac becoming annexed to the City of Alexandria. The injunction was granted by Judge Howard W. Smith on December 31 at a time when County Engineer C. L. Kinnier was preparing to remove the property from the town hall.

It is contended by the two citizens of the former Town of Potomac, in the petition for the injunction, that the engine was purchased from the fire levey which was paid by the citizens of the Town of Potomac as well as other sections of Jefferson District.

Judge Coleman was named to hold the hearing by the governor, at the request of Judge Howard W. Smith, who asked to be relieved.

Owing to the fire which broke out in the lumber yard at South Washington last Tuesday, causing a postponement of the monthly meeting of the Arlington-Fairfax Counties Firemen's Association, the meeting will be held tomorrow night at the Jefferson District Firemen's Hall at 8 o'clock.

While many subjects will come before the association for consideration it is understood that the principal matters will be an effort to have Arlington County furnish gasoline and oil to the fire departments and the starting of a movement for a central fire-alarm system in the county.

It is pointed out that the departments have no means of raising funds for the purchase of gasoline except during the summer when carnivals are held and the days of the old-time carnival when the firemen could raise sufficient funds have passed.

It is the opinion of many of the members of the association that an appropriation should be set aside from the special fire levy in the budget to take care of the purchase of fuel for the operation of the equipment.

The monthly meeting of the Lyon Village Citizens Association will be held Wednesday night at 8 o'clock in the rooms of the Arlington Chamber of Commerce. The membership committee will at this meeting submit its recommendations for a campaign to increase the membership of the association.

The Parent-Teacher Association of the Woodrow Wilson School at Fort Myer Heights announces it will give a turkey dinner at the schoolhouse Wednesday night from 5 to 8 o'clock.

The proceeds will be used for the purchase of needed playground equipment.

The Young Women's Auxiliary, of the Falls Church Baptist Church, will meet tonight at the home of Miss Minerva Snoody at 8 o'clock.

The Lyon Park Citizens Association meets tomorrow night at 8 o'clock in the Community House with the president, Arthur Orr, presiding.

The special committee recently appointed to secure more street lights for the community will report at this meeting what has been accomplished.

Sponsored by the Parent-Teacher Association and the auxiliary to the Falls Church Fire Department, a class in home nursing is being formed. Mrs. Herbert Seamans, the Red Cross nurse, of Fairfax County, will instruct the class.

The course will consist of twelve lessons. The instruction will be furnished free, excepting the charge for the Red Cross instruction manual, which will not be more than 50 cents. Each class will be limited to 20 members.

There will be a special meeting of the Parent-Teacher Association this afternoon in the Madison Schoolhouse at 3 o'clock. At this meeting plans for the time and place of holding the classes will be discussed.

Election of officers will be the principal business to come before the meeting of the Ballston Citizens Association which will be held tomorrow night in the Boy Scout Hall, on Clements avenue, at 8 o'clock.

Concluding the election there will be a discussion on general county matters and all members are asked to attend.

Following the prayer services at Mount Olivet Methodist Church at Ballston Wednesday night, there will be a meeting of the Christian Endeavor Society.

The Thrifton Village Improvement League will hold its monthly meeting tonight at 8 o'clock in the parish hall of the Grace Episcopal Church.

New Health Record Set By Haymarket School

Special to The Washington Post.

Manassas, Va., Jan. 26.—To the school at Haymarket, Prince William County, falls the honor of setting up a new health record for schools in the county in the matter of teeth. This school with a student enrollment of 250 has been examined by Dr. E. R. Devlin, jr., from the State department of health and it was found that with dental corrections made that had been recommended the school now has 100 per cent sound teeth.

Miss Ruby Ryman, Prince William County nurse, has had a large share in the improvement of the health of school children, as have the teachers and parents, who have cooperated with the health authorities. It is believed that the Haymarket School has also established a State record with regard to dental corrections, but this could not be confirmed today.

Friend Calls to Find Virginian Dead in Bed

James W. Argenbright, 53 years old of Bluefield, W. Va., an employe of the J. E. Hanger Co., manufacturers of artificial limbs, was found dead in bed in his room at the Harris Hotel shortly after 2 o'clock yesterday afternoon when a friend called to see him.

Coroner J. Ramsay Nevitt, after viewing the body, announced that he would order an autopsy for today to determine the exact cause of the man's death.

Capital Minister To Lead Evangels

Campaign at Lynchburg Is Planned for May Under Dr. A. E. Karmahan.

Special to The Washington Post.

Lynchburg, Va., Jan. 26.—Under auspices of the Lynchburg Ministerial Union a personal evangelistic campaign is to be conducted here from May 4 to May 9, in which most of the evangelical churches of the city are to cooperate. The work is to be done under the general leadership of Dr. A. Earl Karmahan, of Washington.

The committee on arrangements is composed of the Rev. E. B. Willingham, pastor of Rivermont Baptist Church, Dr. W. G. Pendleton, rector of Grace Memorial Episcopal Church; the Rev. P. M. Hank, pastor of Rivermont Methodist Church; the Rev. Robert Whitfield Miles, pastor of Westminster Presbyterian Church, and the Rev. Raymond L. Markley, pastor of Holy Trinity Lutheran Church.

The campaign is to be preceded by a religious census of the city, and cards from this canvass will be distributed to the churches for use in the personal work. A week of instruction is to be given prior to the campaign.

1840 SLAVE REVOLT RECALLED BY ROPE

USED TO HALT UPRISING

FAIRFAX BUREAU OF THE POST.
P. O. Box 245, Vienna, Va.
Phone Vienna, 64.

Sheriff Eppa Kirby, who has been making a collection of relics connected with crimes and criminals, has on exhibition in his office part of the hangman's halter that was used to execute "Dennis Johnston's blackman," as the label states, on May 22, 1840. Parts of the rope are inclosed in an old hand-made picture frame, which indicates it was made about the same time as the hanging.

A search of records in the county clerk's office reveals that on the "12th day of March, 1840, a trial was held on a charge against Alfred, Spencer, Taylor, Dennis and Henry, all black slaves, for rebellious insurrection for wilfully and maliciously assaulting and beating John Ashford, Stephen B. Jones and Frances P. Ashford with the intent in so doing to kill them, as was charged in the warrant.

"The court found Dennis, Henry and Taylor not guilty, but Alfred and Spencer were ordered hung by the neck until dead at the public place of execution between the hours of 12 and 2 o'clock on the third Friday in April."

Evidently at this date the Commonwealth paid the owners of the slaves their value before hanging them, for the court record reads that: "The court values Spencer and Alfred, slaves this day condemned to hang, Spencer the property of Dennis Johnston, value $850, and Alfred the property of the heirs of George Johnston, $900, which is ordered to be certified to the executive of the Commonwealth."

The discrepancy in the dates on the court record and on the halter may be accounted to a stay of execution which is not shown on the court record. Tradition places the scene of the crime in that section of the county known as "The Neck," which is below Pohick Church, where the slaves attacked the family of Ashford, a prominent land owner in that section. The record is in the handwriting of the clerk of the court at that time and at this date can hardly be read.

At a public meeting of persons interested in the formation of a county library, a committee was appointed, consisting of one person from each district, to formulate plans for founding the institution. A meeting of the committee has been called for next Saturday afternoon at 1:30 o'clock in the county agricultural agent's office at Fairfax. This meeting is held for the purpose of electing permanent officers and to transact such other business as is necessary at this time.

The members of the McLean Volunteer Fire Department and the Ladies Auxiliary will hold a business meeting in the engine house tonight.

Richard Hunter was reelected clerk for three years at the annual business meeting of the McLean Neighborhood House. W. A. Ruff was elected deacon. Mrs. N. J. Jewett was elected deaconess and N. J. Jewett a member of the executive committee at large. Other officers, whose terms have not yet expired, are Frank Sutter, treasurer; W. A. Van Doran, Bennett King and C. W. Rohrer, deacon, and Mrs. David Thomson, deaconess; J. Lee Saefmuller and John F. Burns, members of the executive committee at large and C. W. Rohrer, Sunday school superintendent.

The Parent-Teacher Association and Women's Auxiliary of the Volunteer Fire Department at Falls Church are sponsoring a class in home nursing, soon to be organized with Mrs. Herbert L. Seamans, Fairfax County Red Cross nurse, as instructor. The course will be given in twelve lessons of two hours each. The instruction will be free and the only cost will be that of the Red Cross instruction manual. Each class will be limited to 20 members. Mrs. Guy Erwin, president of the Parent-Teacher Association, and Mrs. R. E. Kendrick, president of the Women's Auxiliary, have called a joint meeting for this afternoon at 3 o'clock in the Madison School at Falls Church to confer with Mrs. Seamans as to the time and place of the weekly meetings.

The Young Women's Auxiliary of the Columbia Baptist Church at Falls Church will meet tonight at the home of their leader, Miss Minerva Snoddy.

The Falls Church Volunteer Fire Department will hold a business meeting tonight in the engine house. Two important questions are to be decided upon, whether or not to hold a carnival sometime next summer with which to raise money to pay off the last note on their fire engine and whether to approve the by-laws of the new Fairfax County Firemen's Association.

The men's class of the Falls Church Presbyterian Church will hold a meeting this evening to arrange final plans for the mothers and daughters banquet to be held February 5.

Mrs. A. M. Wheeler was reelected president of the West Falls Church Ladies Auxiliary at their regular business meeting. Other officers elected were Mrs. Howard Steadman, vice president, and Mrs. H. G. Pope, secretary-treasurer. A study of the African missions will begin at the next meeting.

There will be a meeting tonight of the Houston Bible Class of the Crossman Methodist Church at Falls Church with Rev. W. O. Stearns as principal speaker. A custom of semi-monthly social meetings is being inaugurated by the class.

The Clifton Home Demonstration Club reelected Mrs. Milton Johnson as president for the coming year. Mrs. Joseph Beasley was elected vice president; Mrs. William Godfrey, secretary, and Mrs. Roy Kinchelos, treasurer. The club plans to study foods during the first six months of the year and basket making and fancy work during the last half of the year. Mrs. Johnson and Mrs. Beasley were selected as the delegates to the home demonstration meeting in Fairfax Wednesday.

The night class for the study of poultry, arranged by W. B. Crabill, instructor of the agricultural department of the Floris Vocational High School, has enrolled the following members: Mason Smith, jr., Edward Cross, Clarke Bievens, Milton Murphy, Franklin Elmore, Hunter Bievens, Gilmer Head, Graham James, Samuel McWhorter, John Peck, William Andrea, Preston Polland, Clifton Saffer, Russell Williams, Richard Nevitt, John Beard, Lee Brown, Delano Robey, Martin Caudle and Chester Brasse, all of Floris vicinity.

In the class at Oakton School the following members are enrolled: Frances Miller, Bruce McClure, Marcell Pfalzgraf, Raymond Blackmer, Stanley Dove, Walton Lee, Frederick Kliesgarde, William Scrubb, William Butler, Herman Miller, Gallen Wells, Bernard Speare, Rodger Miller, Paul Kenyon, Francis Miles, Willard Edwards, Harold Compton and Bernard Kidwell.

The Herndon High School Glee Club has elected Miss Anna Day, president; Charles Manley Burton, vice president; Miss Louise Carter, secretary-treasurer; Miss Kathleen Smith, librarian; C. N. Brown, adviser, and Miss M. J. Cline, assistant adviser.

VIRGINIA ASSEMBLY FACES BUSY WEEK

First Action for Election Law Reform Up for Study by Committee.

WILL CONSIDER BUDGET

Special to The Washington Post.

Richmond, Va., Jan. 26.—Delegates and senators began returning to Richmond today after a week-end at their homes, ready tomorrow to begin a week of intensive committee work which will see the budget considered in public hearings, and the first action for election law reform taken by the joint committee of the House and Senate on privileges and elections before which Gov. Pollard has been invited to appear, bringing with him specific proposals for election reform.

Gov. Pollard in his inauguration address suggested that a commission be named to study the situation, but, apparently not liking commissions, all forces, Democrats and Republicans, joined to table a bill carrying out that suggestion and delegating the task to the standing committee Gov. Pollard has suggested a simplification of the complicated balloting system, and a compulsory primary for Republicans to be held on the same day as the Democratic primary to lessen the temptation for Republicans to participate in Democratic elections.

The roads committee will consider the various plans for distributing the gasoline tax among the counties, and seafood legislation is expected to be presented tomorrow, followed shortly by a special message from the governor. The courts of justice committees will consider the judicial council bills, the most controversial of which would compel counties to adopt the trial justice system in place of the justice of the peace system.

Budget hearings will be started Wednesday night, and will continue Thursday and Friday, after which the committee will go into executive session for an item-by-item consideration of the bills, which are designed to appropriate the $101,000,000 with which the State will operate during the next 28 months.

Norfolk, it is understood, will enter the race for the liberal arts college, already sought by Fredericksburg and Lynchburg. These proposals, however, will be fought by many of the women's organizations who are backing a bill to establish a coordinate woman's college at Charlottesville in connection with the University of Virginia, a thing the alumni are organized to defeat, if possible.

More than 230 bills are now before the two houses or their committees, not taking into consideration the identical bills introduced in both branches. Many of these have been killed by committees and many others of local and noncontroversial nature have been reported out. Most of those remaining will require hearings and will bring on fights.

Judge Rodgers Renamed Head of Scout Council

Special to The Washington Post.

Martinsburg, W. Va., Jan. 26.—Judge D. H. Rodgers was reelected president of Berkeley County Council, Boy Scouts of America, at the annual meeting last night. Vice presidents named were Dr. M. H. Porterfield, Lawrence McCormack and W. N. Dunn. Edward Rutledge was named treasurer, A. M. Staubley scout commissioner and Frank Horton, scout executive.

Seventeen scouts were presented with merit badges. Five, Lloyd Poland, Andrew Zepp, Lewis Kogelschatz, Melvin Sprinkle and Paul Martin, were awarded the star scout badge; and Albert Eckert was presented with eleven merit badges he has earned in the past month.

Student Freed on Bond In Brick-Hurling Charge

Special to The Washington Post.

Annapolis, Md., Jan. 26.—Congdon Curtz, 17 years old, of Paterson, N. J., a freshman at St. John's College, was released from the Annapolis Jail today on $500 bond pending the outcome of an investigation by police and college authorities into the serious injury of Homer U. Todd, of Baltimore, a fellow freshman.

Todd was believed to have suffered a fracture of the skull from a brick hurled at him while entering a dormitory of the school early yesterday. He was removed to a Baltimore hospital. The investigation is centering around alleged enmity between the two youths. Curtz has steadfastly protested his innocence and today retained as counsel former State's Attorney Nicholas H. Green, of Annapolis.

THE NEW WEEK'S BILLS

FOX

"A ROMANCE OF THE RIO GRANDE." Fox talking, singing and dancing production, adapted from Katherine Fullerton Gerould's story, "The Conquistador," with Warner Baxter featured, supported by Antonio Moreno, Mary Duncan, Robert Edeson and Mona Maris. Directed by Alfred Santell. Reviewed Sunday afternoon.

By NELSON B. BELL.

In spite of the fact that the action does not always progress from climax to climax with the briskness that might be desired in a colorful border melodrama, this subject, in my opinion, far surpasses "In Old Arizona," which it considerably resembles, in richness and authenticity of atmosphere, story value and those qualities of substantial realism that make a pictured tale believable. Perhaps a familiarity with the Spanish tongue, long held over from residence in a country where it had to be spoken, adds something to "A Romance of the Rio Grande" in my case, but even if the many Castilian speeches are not understood by the casual spectator and auditor, it still seems to me that this picture ought to afford extraordinary entertainment for any audience.

There are many moments of tense drama in the unfoldment of the tale; many, also, of emotional power, and a few of pathos. There are intervals of subtle treachery, others of fine human quality and still others in which the principals decide either to shoot or stab it out. A fiesta on the Santa Margarita rancho affords opportunity for the introduction of songs, dances and a little clowning, wholly in keeping with the Latin nature on such occasions. Tom Patricola does a bit here that is robustly comic, although it is introduced as nothing more than an aid to a completely competent ballerina.

Warner Baxter, in the role of Pablo Wharton Cameron, son of a proud Mexican mother and an American father, does another, and a better, "Cisco Kid." His Spanish is Spanish and his Gringo accent in no sense an imitation. He sings, loves and fights with a fidelity to type that stamps him as a character actor of exceptional endowment. Mona Maris, in the most important role in which I have seen her, is a convincing and sympathetic leading woman and Mary Duncan, as the feminine menace, looks but does not sound the part of Carlotta, whose end is tragic. Antonio Moreno, having been born in Madrid, finds himself faultlessly cast in the role of pretender to the heirship to an inland kingdom and encounters no difficulties whatever in the use of a language that to him is native. Robert Edeson, as Don Fernando, does a distinguished role ample justice, and Senora Jiminez repeats the success that attended her performance as the sharp-tongued diena of Dorothy Burgess in "In Old Arizona." Many others add to the luster of a thoughtful and convincing film play.

The "Water Melon Blues" revue permits Alexander Callam, master of ceremonies, when not singing himself to introduce George Yeager and Mimi Doyle, singers and dancers; Louise and Mitchell, gymnasts, who reverse the usual order of things by making the feminine half of the team dominant; Mammy and Her Picks, a black-face singer and three juvenile burnt cork hoofers; Chas Chase, the eccentric comedian, who devours everything in sight and makes difficult stunts look singularly easy, and a fast-stepping ensemble made up of the Six Southern Steppers and the Sunkist Beauties. The settings are unique and the costuming effective.

The Fox Movietone News, featuring John D. Rockefeller, who reveals an unsuspected sense of humor; King George, Al Smith and James M. Cox, both former aspirants for the Presidency, and the "Herbertiana" overture, arranged by Leon Brusiloff for the exploitation of the solo artists in his orchestra, complete a bill that can be recommended without reservation for the entire family and all the guests.

EARLE

"PLAYING AROUND." A First National-Vitaphone picture from the story "Sheba," by Vina Delmar, starring Alice White, supported by Chester Morris and William Bakewell. Directed by Mervyn LeRoy. Reviewed Saturday night by Mary Porter Russell.

This is a picture so easily classified by the advertisements that have preceded it and by the fact that Alice White is starred, that the possibility of attendance based on misconception of its content is remote. The overcapacity audience at the unreeling reviewed, was composed of men and women who knew what they had come to see. Moreover, they were, for the most part, free citizens, for whom personal preference stood as the only consideration in the selection of entertainment. Thousands like them will enter the house's portals this week, in a continuous, eager flow. And we who do not see as they do, can only marvel at the ways of man.

Vina Delmar's original story, "Sheba," may have been imbued with a certain vitality through the ability she displays at times to make her characters, however trivial, human, and of baring the inmost workings of their hearts and minds. As transferred to the screen, it is an indifferent little tale, motivated by the affairs of a flippant, superficial heroine, who never succeeds in making one care whether or not she marries the wrong man. A stenographer named Sheba, if you would know more, is beloved of a soda jerker operating opposite her father's cigar counter. A mysterious man of wealth enters her life, and she sets her heart on bigger things. But when her father is shot in a hold-up and the soda jerker, turned detective, exposes his rival as the criminal, she decides to marry her first love on $35 per. It seems there is nothing better in sight.

Alice White, as Sheba, acts with the self-conscious cuteness that characterizes her every performance. She also sings a little song, "You Learn about Love Every Day," in an elaborate night club sequence, after winning the beautiful knees contest that brings about her meeting with the gangster, played by Chester Morris. William Bakewell is the scared-faced dispenser of soda, and Richard Carlyle, the father.

The subsidiary attractions are numerous and varied. Bryant Washburn and Helen Jerome Eddy are presented first in a rather touching little comedy, "Niagara Falls," concerning a honeymoon that fails to materialize, after which Harry Gribbon, Andy Clyde and Marjorie Beebe prove once more their proficiency as a laugh-provoking trio in a story of the ring called "Upper Cut O'Brien." The newsreels and a reading of the horoscope for those born in January, complete the screen showings.

There is an overture by the house orchestra and Milton Davis offers an organlogue of song hits from "Sally" that was heartily enjoyed.

Pikeside Farmer Dies.

Martinsburg, W. Va., Jan. 26 (Special).—D. W. Slane, 69, farmer, native of Hampshire County, W. Va., but residing at Pikeside, near here, for a year, died at his home after a short illness. Seven children survive. Burial will be at Capon Bridge, W. Va.

METROPOLITAN

"GLORIFYING THE AMERICAN GIRL." Paramount talking, singing and dancing picture with Technicolor sequences, featuring Mary Eaton, with revue scenes by Rudy Vallee, Helen Morgan and Eddie Cantor. From a story by J. P. McEvoy and Millard Webb, directed by Mr. Webb. Music and lyrics by Walter Donaldson, Irving Berlin, Dave Stamper and Larry Spier. Reviewed Saturday afternoon.

If they had made and released this one when they first began talking about it, it would have been rated the best of the backstage romances. Coming so far down the list, however, I am not sure that even the distinguished names that may be mentioned in connection with it can contrive to write this production high among the knockouts. The story neglects to pack a punch.

The story, incidentally, assumes to visualize the processes by which a beautiful girl of humble origin may in time awake to find herself glorified by the master, Ziegfeld himself. It no doubt has happened precisely as the producers would have us believe, but coming at just this juncture, what is reputed to be Mr. Ziegfeld's first adventure with the celluloids seems to carbon copy a good deal of the Duncan Sisters' "It's a Great Life." The department store background and other common ingredients are conspicuous in both.

But in its revue sequences "Glorifying the American Girl" is a smash hit, executed with the exquisite beauty for which the greatest of all musical revue producers is noted, and performed by some of the most celebrated artists that have ever contributed to the staggering totals of the Ziegfeld pay roll. These revue scenes are done in natural colors, but natural colors reduced to the delicate pastel shades that convey an immediate impression of consummate artistry—with the possible exception of the picturesque tableau that partakes of all the richness of coloring that has characterized all of the All Ben Haggin spectacular stage tableaux vivant.

Rudy Vallee and his Connecticut Yankees appear long enough in the revue to permit the sad-eyed songster an opportunity to confess again that "I'm Just a Vagabond Lover," with the usual devastating effect upon feminine susceptibilities. Helen Morgan, star of "Show Boat," all dressed in black, perches on an immaculate white piano to sing one song, and Eddie Cantor, assisted by Lew Hearn and an unknown accomplice, puts on his famous and very funny tailor shop skit. Songs, dances and gorgeous ensembles are dropped about among these major attractions with prodigious prodigality. Our old friend Norman Brokenshire is seen announcing a distinguished New York first-night audience over the air.

For the rest, Mary Eaton sings and dances her way from the meager job of song plugger in the sheet music department of Heimer's through vaudeville to a stellar spot in Mr. Ziegfeld's most sumptuous production—harassed all the way by a crafty partner, impersonated by Dan Healy, and a lachrymose mother portrayed by Sarah Edwards. At that, Edward Crandall, the boy friend, marries Olive Shea, to leave Mary nothing but the hollow triumph of putting another one over for Ziggy.

The only supplementary offerings are a slightly ribald and rather pointless Vitaphone sketch, "Imagine My Embarrassment," enacted by Frank Orth and Ann Codee, and the interesting Paramount Sound News in which King George, Cardinal Hayes, Babe Ruth and Al Smith are the personalities stressed. COLUMBIA

"THE LOVE PARADE." A Paramount presentation of "The Prince Consort," starring Maurice Chevalier, supported by Jeanette MacDonald. Directed by Ernst Lubitsch. Reviewed Saturday evening (second week) by W. A. Whitney.

A king's wife is a queen but a queen's husband is just that—and no more! Unless, of course, he turns out to be Maurice Chevalier, and then he becomes king. And to show to all and sundry that such is the case "The Love Parade" goes into its second week.

Count Alfred, military attache of the Sylvanian embassy at Paris, is returned to his native land following a series of indiscriminate affairs of the heart. The queen becomes intrigued with the report and the count is asked to demonstrate his technique. To make this illustrious scion of an equally illustrious family eligible for her majesty's hand, Alfred is made a prince and a wedding ensues. How his highness overcomes the boredom of being merely the queen's husband forms the pleasant denouement.

Mr. Chevalier is the prince consort, and a more dashing and debonair prince could not, perhaps, be found. Even his pronounced French accent, cleverly alibied in the picture, adds much to the romantic appeal of Mr. Chevalier's clever role. Jeanette MacDonald, as the queen, is delightfully cast and leaves nothing to be desired for grace and royal poise.

The comedy roles are played by Lupino Lane and Lillian Roth and their expressed desire to "be common" furnishes not the least of the picture's hilarious moments.

At least seven tuneful songs are used and are well adapted to the development of the plot. All the voices are excellent and are clearly recorded and reproduced.

A release of "Station STAR, the Voice of Hollywood," and an issue of the Hearst-Metrotone News are the subsidiaries for the week.

RKO-KEITH

"HIT THE DECK." A Radio Pictures presentation of the musical comedy of the same name by Herbert Fields and Vincent Youmans. Featuring Jack Oakie and Polly Walker. Directed and adapted for the screen by Luther Reed. Reviewed Saturday night (second week) by W. A. Whitney.

Although the marines may have the situation well in hand, the Navy occupies the proscenium at Keith's for another seven days with a musical comedy of Ziegfeldian proportions and magnificence.

The story unfolded in this lavish spectacle is too well known to be detailed again except to say that it is a modern romance of a lass who loved a sailor—the up-to-date counterpart of "H. M. S. Pinafore."

Jack Oakie is the sailor and he is perfectly suited for the role of a dashing, wise-cracking gob, who fulfills all the traditional requirements, especially along amatory lines. Opposite Mr. Oakie is charming Polly Walker, cast as the modernized Little Buttercup. Miss Walker in this, her debut in pictures, carries on the good work begun on the gay white way.

Out of the large supporting cast must be singled Marguerita Padula, the contralto, whose rendition of "Hallelujah," with chorus accompaniment, is outstanding. The song forms the finale of the spirituals and a pitch of dramatic fervor is built up and maintained second only to the denouement of the main plot.

The scenes revolving around the dance given for the Smiths of the fleet are done in technicolor and are lavishly staged, replete with as clever a group of specialty numbers as has been assembled into any picture.

Completing the subsidiaries is a release of Pathe Sound News.

Fred Clark and his R-K-Olia round out the bill with their hilarious burlesque of a rehearsal of a country orchestra and the melodramatic episode about "our Neil."

PALACE

"THE KIBITZER." Paramount all-talking picture, adapted from the stage play of the same name by Joe Swerling and Edward C. Robinson, with Harry Green starred, supported by Mary Brian and Neil Hamilton. Directed by Edward Sloman. Reviewed Saturday night.

To those who formerly deemed the Yiddish skits in which Harry Green was wont to play Keith's the most amusing comedy classics vaudeville ever had to offer, this immensely laughable character study will prove nothing this side of a panic. I say "character study" because this is strictly a one-man affair. Despite the fact that he is surrounded by a supporting cast of no mean caliber, the deft comedian assigned to the title role is the whole show. The entire burden of plot—none too well defined, by the way—the best of a long succession of laughable lines and the bulk of the business of buffooning all are carried by Harry Green, alias Lazarus. If you like him, you like "the Kibitzer"—if not, maybe you'll care for Mary Brian, Neil Hamilton and Albert Gran, anyway.

This funny little cigar store proprietor, who gives advice to all who will take it upon every subject known to man, bungles his own life smashes his daughter's happiness momentarily, has a marvelous facility for doing the wrong thing, and yet through a momentary flash of "wigilance" saves the life of a multimillionaire, gets in on a stock deal and after many vicissitudes comes through with a net profit of $39,200 that a simple minded brother salvages for him from what appears to be a hopeless financial debacle.

A love story threads the narrative but is wholly subordinated to the fun that can be derived from the fabulously rich role of Lazarus. It is this romantic
